TREASURY DEPARTMENT, ONTARIO,

PROVINCIAL AUDITOR'S REPORT.

PROVINCIAL AUDITOR'S OFFICE,

TORONTO, January 15th, 1902.

To HON. G. W. ROSS,
Treasurer of Ontario :

I have the honour to present to you the Public Accounts for the year ended 31st December, 1901.

For the information of the Legislative Assembly, I beg to report the following over expenditures of appropriations as granted by the Supply Bill :

OVER-EXPENDITURES AUTHORIZED BY THE TREASURY BOARD.

49 Vict., Cap. 4, Sec. 20.

Civil Government—Crown Lands Department—Salaries and Expenses	$5,660 67
Civil Government—Official Gazette.....	1,109 85

TORONTO, 18th October, 1901.

C. H. SPROULE, Esq.,
Provincial Auditor.

SIR,—I beg to report that in view of the expense arising from advertising the timber sale of September last, which was not anticipated when the amount requisite for contingencies was considered, the sum appropriated for that service will be insufficient.

I would therefore recommend that authority be given under the Act, R.S.O. Chap. 23, Sec. 20, for payment of the sum of $2,360.67 as detailed in the attached list.

(Sgd)

E. J. DAVIS,
Commissioner.

Copy of a Minute of the Treasury Board, dated the 23rd day of October, A.D. 1901.

Upon consideration of the report of the Honourable the Commissioner of Crown Lands, dated the 18th day of October, A.D. 1901, the Treasury Board doth hereby pursuant to the provisions of section 20, cap. 23, R.S.O. 1897, authorize the issue of a warrant for the sum of two thousand three hundred and sixty dollars and sixty-seven cents ($2,360 67) in favour of the Honourable the Treasurer, for the payment of certain accounts for advertising the timber sale of September last, which was not anticipated when the amount requisite for contingencies was considered, and the sum appropriated for said service being insufficient.

Certified,

J. LONSDALE OAPRÉOL,

Clerk, Treasury Board.

December 10th, 1901.

MEMORANDUM.

The undersigned recommends that under R.S.O., Cap. 23, Section 20, a further sum of $3,300 be appropriated to complete the payments requisite in connection with the salaries and expenses of the Crown Lands Department for the year 1901.

This additional expenditure has been rendered necessary by the unexpected volume of work arising out of the Military Land Grants provided for by the Legislation of last Session. A special staff had to be created to deal with the large number of applications and enormous mass of correspondence, and there has been a large outlay in printing forms of application, certificates, lists of land, maps, etc., as well as for postage and express. It is owing to this and increased business in all branches of the Department that the over-expenditure became unavoidable.

(Sgd.) E. J. DAVIS,
Commissioner.

C. H. SPROULE, Esq.,
Auditor.

Copy of a Minute of the Treasury Board, dated the 10th day of December, A.D., 1901 :

Upon the consideration of the report of the Honourable the Commissioner of Crown Lands, dated the 10th day of December, A.D., 1901, the Treasury Board doth hereby, pursuant to the provisions of Section 20, Cap. 23, R.S.O., 1897, authorize the issue of a warrant for the sum of three thousand three hundred dollars (3,300) in favour of the Honourable the Treasurer, to complete the payments requisite in connection with the salaries and expenses of the Crown Lands Department, the appropriation for said service having become exhausted, owing to the additional expenditure rendered necessary by the unexpected volume of work arising out of the Military Land Grants provided for by the Legislature.

Certified,

J. LONSDALE CAPRÉOL,

Clerk Treasury Board.

TORONTO, 16th December, 1901.

The undersigned respectfully reports to His Honour the Lieutenant Governor in Council :

That the appropriation for Printing and Binding The Ontario Gazette has become exhausted.

The undersigned therefore respectfully requests that authority be given the Honourable the Provincial Treasurer, under the Act R.S.O., 1897, Cap. 23, Sec. 20, to pay the amount named in the attached account, viz., $1,109.85.

I have the honour to be,

Your obedient servant,

(Sgd.) L. K. CAMERON,

King's Printer.

C. H. SPROULE, Esq.,

Provincial Auditor.

Copy of a Minute of the Treasury Board, dated the 20th day of December, A.D., 1901.

Upon consideration of the report of the King's Printer, dated the 16th day of December, A. D. 1901, the Treasury Board doth hereby pursuant to the provisions of section 20, cap. 23, R.S.O. 1897, authorize the issue of a warrant for the sum of one thousand one hundred and nine dollars and eighty-five cents ($1,109.85) in favour of Messrs. Warwick Brothers and Rutter on account of Printing and Binding the Ontario Gazette, the appropriation for said service having become exhausted.

J. LONSDALE CAPRÉOL,

REPORT

COMMISSIONER OF CROWN LANDS

FOR THE YEAR 1901.

To His Honor the Honorable SIR OLIVER MOWAT, G. C. M. G., Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOR :

In compliance with the law, I have the honor to submit for your information and that of the Legislative Assembly a report on the transactions of the Crown Lands Department of the Province of Ontario for the year ending 31st December, 1901.

SALES AND FREE GRANTS.

The area of Crown lands sold during the year for agricultural purposes was 43,617 acres, having a total value of $31,315.36. The amount collected on account of these and sales of former years was $43,211.23.

There was sold as mining lands during the year 10,476 acres, having a value of $23,212.44. On account of these sales and those of former years the sum of $8,870.02 was collected. The area of mining lands leased was 28,540 acres, the rental on which and on lands already under lease amounted to $72,691.80.

The area of clergy lands sold during the year was 577 acres, having a value of $1,121.12. The amount collected on these and former sales was $4,208.14.

The amount collected during the year on account of sales of common school lands was $12,206.64.

The amount collected on account of sales of grammar school lands was $2,500.43.

The area of university lands sold during the year was 5,787 acres, having a value of $4,212.94. On account of these and previous sales there was collected the sum of $2,874.87.

Particulars of the above sales and collections will be found in Appendix 3, page 4.

The number of persons located in free grant townships during the year was 1,367. The area located was 148,312 acres. In addition to this, 138 persons purchased 6,258 acres under the Free Grants and Homesteads Act. Four hundred and sixty-six patents were issued. This shows a considerable increase over last year, both in the number of locatees and area located, the influx of settlers into the Rainy River valley being responsible to a large extent. Two townships were opened during the year for settlement under the Free Grants Act, viz., McIntyre and McGregor, both of which are in the District of Thunder Bay. See Appendix 11, page 25.

AGRICULTURAL LANDS.

It may be interesting to note briefly the conditions under which agricultural lands are disposed of in this Province and to make a short general survey of those sections to which settlement is being more particularly directed at the present time. Generally speaking, the lands of the Crown may be divided into three distinct classes: (1) Those valuable for agriculture; (2) Those which have little agricultural value but which have large quantities of timber standing on them; (3) Those valuable for mining purposes.

Agricultural lands in this Province are either given to actual settlers as free grants or sold at the price of 50 cents per acre, except in some few localities in the older parts of the Province where the prices range from 70 cents to $1.00 per acre. Whether located or sold they are subject to the performance of certain conditions in the way of improvements and residence before the issue of patent. The country known as the "Huron and Ottawa Territory" comprising the northern parts of the counties of Peterboro, Hastings, Frontenac, Addington, Renfrew, the districts of Parry Sound, Haliburton, Muskoka, and that part of Nipissing south of the Mattawa river, (excluding, of course, the Algonquin National Park) has for years been open to settlement under the Free Grants Act. The public land in this region has been largely picked over. The remaining lots are rough and not much new settlement is now going in. The locations that take place there are caused mainly by the cancellation of old locations for non-performance of settlement conditions and their re-location to settlers in the vicinity, or the sons of settlers who have become old enough to take land and are desirous of settling down alongside their parents, even if the land is rather rough and of inferior quality. Other free grant lands are situated in the Thunder Bay district and in the Rainy River valley.

The land in the Temiscaming, Sturgeon Falls, Warren, Sudbury, Massey Station and Dryden agencies are all "sale" lands.

The trend of settlement has of late been largely in the direction of the Temiscaming district, the western part of Nipissing, the country around Sault Ste. Marie, the Thunder Bay district and the Rainy River valley. Each of these sections has its peculiar attractions, and each has had a considerable influx of settlers during the past year.

The people of older Ontario now realize that to secure cheap homesteads with many of the conveniences of better settled localities, they need not go beyond the boundaries of their own Province, while many homeseekers from other Provinces and the United States are appreciating the advantages offered to settlers in Ontario. Owing to the extensive construction of railways, pioneer life in this Province has been stripped of many of the discomforts which existed in past years. It is not now necessary for the settler to go far back from railways in order to secure good land, except in the Temiscaming country. He is at no expense for wood for building, fuel, or fencing (in some countries, especially on prairies, a very considerable item) and he finds an abundance of pure water close at hand. There is a good market for all the timber he has to remove in clearing his land, and work can always be had in the woods or at the mine, which enables many a settler to tide over the first few years, the trying period on a bush farm. When his clearing is large enough to produce more than he consumes, he finds a ready market at high prices for all his surplus, whether it be hay, grain or vegetables. The condition of the back country is every year becoming more and more improved. Roads are being built both by the Government and the municipalities, school sections are being formed, and in the matter of railway and postal facilities the pioneer in New Ontario is often as well off as many farmers in the older parts of the Province.

In the month of May a settlers' excursion to the Temiscaming district was conducted by the Director of Colonization. About 200 land-seekers from different parts of the Province availed themselves of the opportunity of cheap transportation and the services of the "land guides" furnished by the Government to assist them in their examination of the country. All were highly pleased with the prospects for settlement and surprised at the uniformly good quality of the soil, its freedom from stone and the abundance of wood and water. Nearly every member of the party took up land, many of them returning to their homes immediately in order to bring up their families and effects. The excursion has undoubtedly had a stimulating effect on immigration to that section as a stream of homeseekers continued pouring in from that time till the close of navigation, indeed up to the end of the year.

In all, 957 persons took up 160 acre locations in the Temiscaming district, a total of 153,120 acres, equal to over 6 townships. The population is now placed at 2,500 souls, an increase of 150 per cent. for the year. The influx of settlers has been felt in the villages as well, and building has been brisk there during the whole season. The sawmills have been working day and night; land has been laid out in village lots, and churches, schools, stores and dwellings have been built, while in the country the erection of buildings and clearing of land has gone steadily on. The Temiscaming district lies a long distance from railway communication and the cost of moving in with a family and effects is quite a considerable item of expense. Many of the newcomers on arrival there had very little ready money left with which to pay for their land. The first instalment on a 160-acre lot is $40, and it was found that in many cases it would be a great convenience if the settlers were allowed to secure their lots by making a small deposit until they could get settled and earn something with which to pay the balance of the first instalment. An arrangement was accordingly consented to by the Department by which they were to pay a deposit of $5 on the land they wished to take up, of which privilege a large number availed themselves. Sales were not then carried out to such applicants, and so a large area which was actually taken up by bona fide settlers in that country and which will be paid for at the usual price of 50 cents per acre, does not appear in the return of lands sold for agricultural purposes.

To accommodate the large number of incoming settlers all the surveyed townships in the district were opened for settlement, with the exception of Lorrain, which is under timber license and contains but a small proportion of arable land. Another township called Firstbrook, was surveyed and has also been placed in the market. In all 18 townships have been thrown open, containing an area of 414,720 acres.

The new settlers—many of them farmers and farmers' sons from Old Ontario—speak in highest terms of the land which they have taken up, and the prospect of improving their position in that district. The country is well watered by creeks and streams, and is wooded with spruce and other soft timbers. The soil is usually a black muck with a friable clay subsoil which is pronounced the equal in fertility to any in older Ontario. There is every indication that the tide of immigration which started last summer will be continued during next, and the permanent prosperity of the region seems well assured.

What the people in this country most desire, however, is speedier communication with the outside world and easier means of travel among themselves. During the year over 20 miles of new colonization road have been built by the Government, and 40 miles of old road improved. The construction of a railway from the main line of the C.P.R. is anxiously awaited, and the building of further colonization roads, which at the present time do not approach the limits of settlement by many miles, is urgently required.

Nearly all the good land open for sale in the Sturgeon Falls district has been disposed of, and squatters have gone into the townships further up the Sturgeon River from which all the pine timber has not yet been removed. It may be necessary in a short time, on account of the increased population there, to throw open additional townships for settlement. Further west, the townships of Ratter, Hugel, Casimir and Kirkpatrick were opened early last year and an agent was appointed at Warren on the C. R. R. to take the applications of those desiring to obtain land. These townships consist principally of fine agricultural land and have been largely taken up. A good deal of colonization road has been built, but settlement has proceeded faster than the road-building and has extended into several other townships around the head of Lake Nipissing. A colony of Swedes is located in Hugel township and they are proving to be excellent settlers. So well satisfied are these people with the country, that one of their number has gone back to his native land this winter, aided by a grant from the Dominion Government, for the purpose of bringing out 100 families to take up land in this locality.

Along the Sault branch of the C. P. R. the settlers have been very prosperous. Large sums of money have been spent on sawmills and other works at Blind River, Webbwood and other points along the north shore, and the increased employment afforded by the extension of the sawmilling industry has created markets for farm produce than which no better exist in Ontario to-day. A good class of settlers from the older parts of the Province is going into this country. The farmers there are turning their attention more to grain growing and stock-raising, as they have discovered that they can get good prices for everything they have to sell. The growth of population in and about the town of Sault Ste. Marie, and the immense expenditures being made there by the allied Clergue companies have had the effect of attracting a large number of people of the farming class to that neighborhood.

The good land in the immediate vicinity of Port Arthur and Fort William has nearly all been disposed of. A great many people who went up to this country during the past year found profitable employment on the Canadian Northern Railway and other industrial works being carried on there. Considerable tracts of land held by eastern parties which were acquired as mining lands many years ago are now being sold to immigrants for farming purposes. For these reasons the number of locations actually carried out in that section is not quite so large as last year. Parts of the townships of McIntyre and McGregor which were set apart for sale as mining lands some years ago, have been open for location under the Free Grants Act. The Dryden settlement is in a thriving condition.

The settlers in the Rainy River valley now enjoy railway communication with Winnipeg, Port Arthur and the east. A great deal of money has been spent among them by the building of the Canadian Northern Railway. Many people attracted to the country by the construction of that road have taken up land there and promise to be valuable settlers. Crops were good this year and prices high. During the past four or five years great improvements have been made on the farms in the Rainy River valley in the way of clearing and building. Settlement has lately extended into two or three townships not yet attached to any agency. These will be opened immediately and assigned to one of the agencies already established.

MILITARY LAND GRANTS.

During the year about 20,000 letters were received at the Department relative to the land grants for veterans of the Fenian Raids and South African war provided by the Act of the last Session of the Legislature (1st Edw. VII., chapter 6). In addition to this numerous inquiries were made in person. Some 18,000 applications have been made under the Act. The work of examining, recording and filing these applications and dealing with the correspondence in regard to them has been a very great addition to the work of the Departmental staff, and has necessitated the employment of extra temporary clerks throughout nearly the whole year.

THE MINERAL INDUSTRY.

The expansion of the mineral industry of the Province, noted in the report for 1900, continued without interruption during 1901. So important are iron and steel in modern civilization that they may be said to constitute the material basis upon which the structure of society rests, and it is, therefore, gratifying to be able to record that this essential branch of the mineral industry is rapidly developing in Ontario. Three smelting companies have been producing pig iron steadily throughout the year, the total product reaching 116,370 tons, valued at $1,701,706, an advance over 1900 of 53,984 tons and $765,637, respectively. Besides the pig iron, 14,471 tons of steel were made, worth $347,280. Formerly the larger proportion of ore used in the manufacture of pig iron in Ontario was imported from the United States, but the deposits situated within the Province are now in a position to supply the bulk of the ore required, and last year 56 per cent. of the quantity smelted was native ore, mainly the product of the Helen mine at Michipicoton, which has been worked on a large scale all year. The demand for ore is greatly stimulating the search for deposits, and in Northern Ontario the widely extended iron ranges are being traced out and examined for workable bodies of ore. As there is no known reason why such bodies should not exist equal in size and value to the famous mines of Minnesota and Michigan, which occur under almost identical geological conditions, there is good ground for belief that careful prospecting by the diamond drill and otherwise will be richly rewarded, though the process may be tedious and expensive.

The nickel-copper mines of the Sudbury district have been more active and productive than at any previous time. The total quantity of ore smelted was 271,000 tons, and the quantity of matte produced was 29,680 tons, the nickel and copper contents of which are estimated at 4,444 tons and 4,197 tons, respectively, a very decided increase as compared with 1900.

During the year the Mond Nickel Company's smelting works at Victoria Mines have gone into operation. The product is a high grade matte made by the Fluorwasser process, containing about 80 per cent. of nickel and copper. This plant is a substantial, well-constructed one, and the office and other buildings are of a character in keeping with the rest of the establishment.

The Canadian Copper Company has been carrying on work very vigorously throughout the year, and is opening up some of its properties hitherto undeveloped. One of these, the Creighton mine, in the southwest corner of the Township of Snider, is proving to be an extensive and valuable deposit, about 500 tons of ore daily being shipped over the Manitoulin and North Shore Railway to the smelters at Copper Cliff. The Ontario Smelting Works for the re-treatment of the Canadian Copper Company's matte were opened in 1901. The low grade product of the Company's furnaces is crushed ground, calcined and re-smelted into a high grade matte, containing about 80 per cent. of metallic contents.

The Gertrude and Elsie nickel mines, owned by the Lake Superior Power Company are now producing ore, and roast-heaps, smelting plants, etc., etc., are being set up on the former location for treating the product of both mines. Ore from the Gertrude is also being sent to the Company's reduction works at Sault Ste. Marie.

The non-nickeliferous copper ores of the north shore of Lake Huron are being actively exploited, among other places at Rock Lake, the Stobie Mine, Massey Station and Bruce Mines. The Rock Lake Mining Company's concentrating plant began operations about the end of the year and shipment of concentrates to the smelters at Dollar Bay, Michigan, has been begun. A project is on foot for the erection of a smelting plant at some convenient point on the north shore for the treatment of concentrates from the copper mines of the region. The development of the industry in this section will be materially hastened by the construction of the Bruce Mines and Algoma Railway, which at the close of 1901 was completed nearly to Rock Lake.

Gold and silver mining have been prosecuted with some success during the year. In Western Ontario the Mikado, Sultana and Sakoosé gold mines and the West End silver mine have been steadily at work, and the Black Eagle, formerly the Regina, gold mine has been equipped with a new thirty-stamp outfit and began crushing ore about the end of December. In the Hastings district, the Belmont mine, owned by the Cordova Exploration Company, has been operating its thirty stamps continually on free milling ore, and the Canadian Goldfields, Limited, have been extracting gold and arsenic successfully from the mispickel characteristic of that locality. This mine enjoys the distinction of being the only producer of arsenic in America, and now yields an appreciable proportion of that material used on the continent.

Viewing the mining industry as a whole, the year 1901 has seen a decided advance in the amount of capital and labor employed, and the quantity and value of output. It is quite apparent that in the development and settlement of Northern Ontario the part played by the mining industry will be a very important one.

COLLECTIONS.

The total collections of the Department on account of all sources of revenue were $1,634,724.42. Of this $147,528.75 was derived from land collections; $1,479,847.35 from timber, and $7,348.32 from miscellaneous sources. See Appendix 4, page 5.

DISBURSEMENTS.

The total disbursements of the Department were $252,977.23. This includes $29,624.62 for fireranging; $17,182.35 for surveye, and $18,314.76 for refunds. It also includes the sum of $35,268.08 for special services under the direction of the Department, such as Diamond Drills, $3,485.70; Colonization, $6,177.46; Mining Schools, $42,069.45; Iron Mining Fund, $6,737.80; Explorations in 1900, $12,006.45; Parks, $9,166.18; Immigration, $4,825.00. For particulars of these expenditures see Appendix 6, page 7, and Appendix 7, page 19.

WOODS AND FORESTS.

The total revenue collected from woods and forests during the year was $1,479,847.35. Of this $571,383.59 was derived from bonus; $63,042.72 from ground rent; $2,272.38 from transfer fees; and $843,148.66 from timber dues. See Appendix 4, page 5, and Appendix 9, page 24.

It was intended to offer for sale by tender early in the year a few forfeited berths, and certain areas in the District of Algoma, which, owing to mining and prospecting being actively prosecuted in them and lumbering being carried on all around them, were liable to be swept by fire.

These areas were advertised to be sold in March, but before the sale took place an epidemic of smallpox broke out in the Algoma district, and it became apparent that a careful examination could not be made by those who might desire to bid, as rangers could not be sent into the infected region. Therefore the sale, so far as the berths in the Algoma district were concerned, was postponed, but the forfeited berths were offered on the day stated. Only one of the forfeited berths, viz. that situated on Lake Temiscaming, in the District of Nipissing, was sold, at a bonus of $30,195. Its area was 24 square miles. The other forfeited berths did not reach the upset price.

The question had then to be considered what disposition should be made of the berths in the Algoma district, and it was determined to put them up for sale by public auction on the 17th September. Advantage was taken of this sale to offer several berths in the vicinity of Sault Ste. Marie, through some of which the Algoma Central Railway was being built and which from their position were likely to be required in the immediate future for mining or settlement purposes, and also certain small areas on Pigeon river, in the District of Thunder Bay, which contained scattered timber in a very exposed position. The usual experience of the Department is that where railway construction takes place forest fires follow, and this was an additional reason for selling the timber on these townships, which had been surveyed into farm lots and were desired for settlement and mining. The townships were carefully explored, estimated and valued. While they were not, strictly speaking, pine-bearing townships, the proportion of pine to other timbers being relatively small, the fact that the trees were large and suitable for board or square timber caused the berths to sell at high prices. The sale was well attended and the prices reached were, having regard to the quality and situation of the timber, the most satisfactory in the history of the Department, more especially as the right to cut the timber was limited to a period of 10 years and the red and white pine only was sold. The total area offered was 117 miles. The total area sold at the sale was 230 miles. The amount realized as bonus was $732,787.50 of which $518,823.35 was paid in during the year 1901, leaving $213,951.55 to be collected during 1902. The average price per mile for the right to cut the red and white pine timber on these areas during the next ten years was over $1,835, and the land still remains the property of the Crown.

The area which was not sold consisted of the forfeited berths in the older parts of the Province, from which the pine timber had been cut away and on which there was nothing of any great value. These limits have since been sold at nominal prices to persons owning mills in the vicinity sawing for local supply.

The revenue from timber dues and ground rent during 1901 is, with two or three exceptions, the largest in the history of the Province. The state of the lumber trade during the whole year has been satisfactory to those engaged in every branch of it. The prices of all grades of lumber have been profitable and well sustained. There has been abundant work for everybody connected with the trade at greatly advanced wages, and supplies of all kinds necessary in the business have gone up very much in price. It will thus be seen that while the lumberman has had good markets and satisfactory prices for his products, the general prosperity of the trade has been shared in by his employees and the business community generally. The present outlook is that next season will be as good as, if not better than, the last.

The cut of saw logs last winter was not as large as was expected owing to the outbreak of smallpox in certain localities, which rendered it difficult to keep organizations intact and prosecute the work systematically and economically. Thanks to the rigorous methods adopted by the Provincial Board of Health to stamp out the disease, as well as to prevent its spread, what might have been a very serious epidemic, demoralising the lumber trade and seriously affecting the revenue of the Province, was kept pretty well confined to limited areas.

The outbreak of smallpox has had one good effect. It has directed attention to the insanitary conditions and surroundings of many of the lumber shanties, and under the direction of the Provincial Board of Health plans of model buildings have been prepared, and rules and regulations framed, the effect of which has already been felt in the improvement of the character of many camp buildings and their surroundings.

Another step in the direction of bettering the condition of the lumber employee is the establishment among the camps of a system of travelling libraries, for which the sum of $1,200 was voted by the Legislature at its last session. Many lumbermen are doing what they can to aid the movement by putting up buildings at their camps for reading and recreation rooms. Some twenty-eight or thirty of these buildings have already been erected. Small libraries have been distributed through a number of shanties, and magazines and newspapers supplied for the use of the men, who are enabled to spend a part of the long winter evening in the reading room, and thus keep in touch with the affairs of the outside world. To those who remember the old style of shanty, which was more like a den than a habitation for human beings, and the almost entire absence of any care or thought for the mental or physical comfort of the men, the change is as from dark to light. From reports received from the rangers of the Department it is apparent that the usual good results of such action have followed. Those lumbermen who have provided reading facilities have been able to secure a better class of employee, and the quarters being comfortable and the surroundings more pleasant, the men have been contented and not so unsettled or anxious to move about from one operation to another.

I regret to say that smallpox has again this winter developed in certain localities, but with the improved sanitary conditions, the stringent regulations in force, and the close medical surveillance that is being had, the disease, it is believed, will be localized, and not assume such proportions as will seriously affect the lumbering operations of the present season.

During the year examinations under the Ontario Cutters Act were held at Arnprior, Peterboro, Huntsville and Rat Portage, at which 68 cutters were found qualified and duly licensed. Their names will be found added to the list of licensed cutters in Appendix 24, page 43.

THE SAWMILLING BUSINESS.

As a further result of the prohibition of export of pine sawlogs cut on Crown lands in Ontario there has been during the past year a substantial extension in the sawing capacity of the mills of the Province, particularly on Lake Huron and the Georgian Bay. Several Michigan mill men who own Ontario limits being no longer able to obtain supplies of timber from this Province and having become convinced that the enforcement of the "manufacturing condition" is the settled policy of the Government, have moved their plants over to Ontario, while others have erected new mills on this side of the Great Lakes. Examples of this can be seen at Blind River on the North Shore and at Sarnia and Sandwich, where mills have been built which have a combined sawing capacity of at least 150 millions of feet annually. Many Canadian lumbermen, too, have embarked in the business of sawing by contract for American limit holders and have erected new mills or made large additions to their plants. The new mills are of the most modern type and are being fitted with the most economical and best machinery. It is worthy of note, in this connection, that the Dominion Government by Order in Council passed in May last followed the lead of Ontario by prohibiting the export of pine sawlogs cut under license on Indian Reserves. In the Province of British Columbia also, the export in the unmanufactured state of pine logs cut on Crown lands has been prohibited.

FOREST RESERVES

The past summer was the first since the establishment of the Temagami Forest Reserve, referred to in my last report. Early in May a staff of 7 fire-rangers and 3 assistants was placed on duty in this Reserve. About eight fires were reported during the whole season and these were all extinguished before any damage was done. This country is becoming more popular as a resort for summer tourists, many of whom travel long distances, attracted there by the lacustrine beauty, the solitude, the fishing and the comparative ease with which the country can be reached. The danger from fire is therefore increasing every year. Thus the wisdom of setting apart all the land around the shores of Lake Temagaming as a Forest Reserve, and making special provision for guarding the large quantities of pine timber situated there is quite apparent.

The Reserve in the township of Sibbey has been placed under the charge of the Crown Timber Agent at Port Arthur. No fire occurred on this Reserve. In the Eastern Forest Reserve two fires occurred. They burned over only two or three acres, however, before the ranger on duty succeeded in stamping them out.

THE PULPWOOD INDUSTRY.

The progress made during the past year by the several companies which are under agreement with the Government to build pulp and paper mills within the Province has, on the whole, been satisfactory, though in some cases, perhaps, it has not reached so advanced a stage as was expected. Few businesses require the investment of greater capital than the pulp industry. To be remunerative it must be conducted on a very extensive scale, and several important facts have to be ascertained before an industry can be successfully established. The first is undoubtedly that there is a plentiful supply of raw material close at hand or easily procurable. Extensive explorations are sometimes necessary in order to be assured of this, which take time and cost money. There must also be adequate power convenient to some shipping point. The machinery used in the making of pulp is of the heaviest kind, and enormous energy is needed to turn the wheels in a mill of even moderate size. Then, finally, the investor must be assured of a market for his manufactured product and of shipping facilities and freight rates which will enable him to reach that market with a margin of profit in his favor. All these essentials have to be satisfactorily determined before an industry can be successfully established. It is better, therefore, that investors should make haste slowly than that there should be a collapse of even one large concern, which might shake the confidence of the people in the value of our pulpwood resources.

The Sault Ste. Marie Pulp and Paper Company has operated its mechanical mill throughout nearly the whole year, and has had under construction a chemical mill of immense proportions.

The Sturgeon Falls mill has been tied up by the litigation between the Sturgeon Falls Pulp Company and Edward Lloyd, Limited. In the month of October an award was made, under which the whole property was to be taken over by the Sturgeon Falls Pulp Company. The latter company have now taken possession. They have let contracts for the immediate construction of paper mills and are making active preparations to operate on an extensive scale.

The Spanish River Pulp and Paper Company have had 250 men employed in construction and other work on their property. They have expended over $100,000 on buildings and have contracted for $120,000 worth of machinery and $150,000 worth of work on buildings, dams and canal. They expect to have a 100-ton pulp mill in operation during the coming summer.

The Blanche River Pulp and Paper Company and the Nepigon Pulp, Paper and Manufacturing Company have experienced some difficulty in the selection of suitable sites for their respective mills. The former company finally decided that Les Erables rapids on the Ottawa river, a short distance above the town of Mattawa, was the best point available where sufficient power for their purposes can be developed. This water power being on the Inter-Provincial boundary, they had to acquire from the Quebec Government rights on the eastern bank of the stream. On account of delays thus occasioned they have asked for an extension of time in which to complete their agreement.

The Nepigon company, after examinations of various sites by their engineer, applied for the power at Cameron's Pool on the Nepigon River, for which a lease issued to them in August last. They have since acquired additional land in the vicinity, have had plans prepared, and will proceed immediately with the erection of their mills.

Nothing has yet been done in the construction of mills by the Keewatin Power Company, although the sum of $500,000 has already been expended on their water power on the Winnipeg River. It was the expectation of this company to market their product in the east, but owing to the heavy freight rates they found they could not compete with mills more favorably situated. They have latterly been directing their attention towards the markets of Japan, New Zealand and Australia, in which countries they hope to find an outlet for their manufactured product.

The pulpwood industry in Ontario is a development of comparatively recent date, but with the stupendous quantity of paper required by the world's markets, which is yearly increasing, it ought to grow enormously within the next ten years. The situation is made the more interesting to Canadians by the fact that the pulpwood forests of the United States, owing to the immense demand for raw material, are rapidly being depleted. As to our ability to supply the markets of the world it may be said that the future is with us, for in addition to the vast quantity of pulpwood on Crown Lands this side of the Height of Land—to say nothing of that on lands which have been sold, located or patented—there is known to be on the Hudson's Bay slope in this Province an area of about 65,000 square miles of pulpwood lands, which according to estimates based on the explorations of 1900, will yield approximately 288,000,000 cords. The wealth which will be added to the Province when that region is opened up by railways is almost incalculable.

The common experience in forest covered countries the world over is that vast areas of valuable timber lands are overrun and laid waste by forest fires. Considerable sections of Ontario, and Quebec as well, once timbered with pine, spruce and other valuable woods have been ravaged by fire and are now covered by a presently worthless growth of jack-pine, aspen, and white birch. The protection of our great pulpwood areas is, therefore, a matter of vital importance to the people of Ontario. This matter is further referred to under the head of Fireranging.

FIRE RANGING.

The number of licensees who had fire rangers on their limits last year was 76. The number of rangers employed on licensed lands was 236. In addition to the rangers in the Temagami and Eastern Forest Reserves, there were 10 rangers employed on the Crown domain in the Wabnapitae and Jocko River countries and in the District of Rainy River. The total expenditure of the Department, covering one-half the cost of the staff on licensed lands and the whole cost on unlicensed lands, was $29,624.62.

In the Rainy River and Thunder Bay districts the rainfall was slightly greater than in previous years, but further east the summer was exceedingly dry. No fires of any account occurred in the western part of the Province; in fact on any pine lands owned by the Crown, except one small fire in the Michipicoton country. On licensed lands, from the reports received, the fires which did any damage appear to have been few in number and the amount of timber destroyed was small indeed. The most serious fire, perhaps, was the one in the Peterboro district, which damaged about 30,000 sawlogs and destroyed some valuable river improvements. It is understood that the damaged timber is being taken out this winter. The licensees, who, as is usual, were asked their views as to the work done and suggestions in the direction of strengthening the system, express satisfaction with the service as now constituted.

In the Temiscaming district a fire broke out early in July, due, it is believed, to smouldering brush heaps left by settlers which were fanned into flame by a gale of wind. No great quantity of pine was damaged; the timber there is principally spruce and other soft woods. A tract of about 44,000 acres in extent was overrun by this fire, or rather fires, for several sprang up in different places. Serious loss of buildings and effects was experienced by some of the settlers, many of whom were new in the country. After investigation, a grant of $2,000 was made by the Government to relieve the sufferers. A committee was formed of residents in the locality in whose hands $1,200 of the grant was placed. Another $500 was spent for clover and grass seed, which was distributed gratuitously to be sown on the burned areas, and $300 was appropriated to replace a lately erected school house in the township of Kerns, which had been destroyed by the fire and which the people were unable to rebuild.

Rumours have reached the Department from different sources to the effect that a couple of fires occurred last summer in the country north of the Height of Land. Private exploring has been going on there, and perhaps these fires were caused by carelessness or neglect. The explorations made by the Department during the summer of 1900 proved that this country is enormously rich in spruce and other woods suitable for pulp and paper making, and as it is beginning to be travelled by the railway surveyor, the explorer and the mineral prospector, it will have to be brought under the fire-ranging system which is in operation in other parts of the Province. It may not be necessary in the first instance to do more than place rangers on the principal rivers—which are the highways of travel—to post up notices and distribute them among parties with whom they come in contact, and for the purpose of enlisting the aid of the Hudson's Bay Company's traders and others in inculcating a spirit of care among the Indians and travellers generally through that great Northland.

THE PUBLIC PARKS.

The Algonquin National Park, preserving as it so largely does all the charm and attraction of the primeval forest, has become an object of Provincial interest, and it will give general satisfaction to know that, so far as the preservation of the wild animals native to the district is concerned, as well as most of the other purposes for which the Park was established, the objects aimed at are being achieved. Wild life is becoming abundant, and the number of fur-bearing animals, such as beaver, otter, fisher, etc., is very great. The same remark applies to the game animals—moose and deer. Wolves the natural enemies of the deer, seem to be increasing, as is natural with the increase of their prey, but the vigorous measures adopted to kill these forest pests will, it is hoped, be successful. Lumbering continues to be prosecuted in the Park, and under the amendment passed in 1900 preparations are being made to cut hardwood on some old limits. The right to cut any timber other than pine expires in 1930. A well-written article descriptive of Algonquin Park by Mr. J. A. Duff, B.A., will be found in Appendix 23, page 40.

The Rondeau Provincial Park was visited by a larger number of pleasure-seekers than in any previous year, and the experiments in breeding pheasants, deer, etc., for the purpose of stocking the wooded portion of the Park, covering some 2,500 acres, are proving successful.

For reports of the Superintendents of the respective Parks see Appendices Nos. 21 and 22, page 38.

CROWN SURVEYS.

The following Crown surveys have been carried out this year :—

In the District of Nipissing the Township of Firstbrook has been subdivided into lots of 320 acres each. In the District of Thunder Bay the residue of the Township of Conmee has been subdivided into lots of 320 acres each. Portions of several townships in the Districts of Thunder Bay and Rainy River which had been burned over were reposted for the convenience of parties taking up lands therein. Several minor surveys have been performed during the year.

The accounts of the ten exploration survey parties in Northern Ontario, the reports of which have been already published by order of the Legislature, have been examined and closed, with the result that the total cost has been $40,518.28, being a very close approximation to the original vote of the Legislature. Instructions have issued for the survey of certain base and meridian lines in the District of Algoma.

The surveyors' reports of the survey of the following townships: Bertram, Residue of Conmee, Firstbrook and Latchford, the accounts for which have been closed this year, will be found in Appendices 17 to 20 inclusive, pages 33 to 36 inclusive.

MUNICIPAL SURVEYS.

The Department has, during the year, on petition from the municipalities of the County of Russell, and the Townships of Cumberland, Elderslie and West Flamborough, issued instructions for a survey of the portion of the boundary line between the Townships of Cumberland and Olarence; for the survey of lots numbers three and four in the fifth and sixth concessions, and part of the sixth and seventh concession line in the Township of Cumberland; portion of the blank concession line between the third and fourth concessions of the Township of Elderslie; and road allowances between lots numbers twelve and thirteen in the fifth concession of the Township of West Flamborough.

The following municipal surveys have been confirmed during the year under the provisions of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1897, Chap. 181, s. 14, ss. 4, such surveys so confirmed being final and conclusive upon all parties; the allowance for road between the tenth and eleventh concessions of the Township of Osgoode from lot number twelve northerly to the north boundary of the township; and the blind or blank concession line between the third and fourth concessions of the Township of Elderslie, extending from the side road between lots numbers five and six to the side road between lots numbers ten and eleven.

The particulars relating to these surveys will be found in Appendices 13 and 14, pages 28 and 29.

MINING AND OTHER SURVEYS.

The Mines Act of 1897 and amendments thereto require that applicants to purchase or lease mining lands in unsurveyed territory shall file in the Department surveyor's plans (in duplicate) of their proposed mining locations with field notes and descriptions by metes and bounds before any sale or lease can be carried out; and under Orders in Council dated 23rd of January, 1892, 3rd December, 1892, and 22nd September, 1893 applicants to purchase islands or locations for agricultural purposes in unsurveyed territory are required to file surveyor's plans (in duplicate) of their locations, which are to be of the form and size, wherever practicable, prescribed by the Mines Act, together with the necessary affidavits.

Under the above Act and regulations, in the Districts of Parry Sound, Nipissing, Algoma, Rainy River and Thunder Bay an area of 15,095.5 acres has been sold and patented during the year, for which the sum of \$30,559.50 has been received; and an area of 16,170 $\frac{1}{2}$ acres has been leased at \$1 per acre for the first year's rental.

DEPARTMENT OF CROWN LANDS,

(Appendix No. 17.)

TOWNSHIP OF BERTRAM.

DISTRICT OF NIPISSING.

PETERBOROUGH, Ontario, December 6, 1900.

SIR,—The instructions appointing me to survey the Township of Latchford, dated June 26th last, also authorized me to survey this township which lies immediately east of it.

The two townships form the tongue of land which extends from the west shore easterly into Lake Nipissing. Bertram is bounded on the north and east by the lake and on the south side by the French River.

As the plan shows, the township is very much cut up with long, deep bays and narrow, tortuous water stretches that almost interlock as they get inland, except at a few points they hold deep water. The character and aspect of the township are very similar to those of Latchford. The surface is generally low, undulating. It is covered, for the most part, with a young growth of mixed bush, jack pine, poplar, spruce, birch and tamarac. There are scattered throughout small red and white pine not yet of much commercial value.

Although not so well suited for agriculture as Latchford it contains a fair proportion of farming land, being composed of sandy clay loam or a sub-soil of stiff clay of gravel and not infrequently stone and bed rock.

The arable land, as would be expected, is found chiefly in the interior, the land along the shores being somewhat rocky and broken. A careful micrometric survey was made of all the islands adjoining the township. They number about three hundred and are so designated on the plan. The areas are put in table form with the field notes, excepting the east part of Island A, Burnt, Blueberry and Sandy Islands, whose areas are given on the plan, upon them respectively.

The islands generally are covered with brush like on the main land, and in summer impart freshness and beauty to the landscape. It is needless to say that fish and game of all kinds common to this section are found in abundance. Red deer are plentiful and moose are rapidly multiplying. Nearly every day, in season, might be seen visiting tourists and sportsmen leisurely trolling or deeply engaged with hook and line from some jutting point of rock.

No more picturesque or attractive resort can, I think, be found in Ontario for sport and summer residences than among these islands which dot the river and lake in this locality.

They can be reached in a few hours by steamer from Sturgeon Falls or North Bay stations on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Should the projected Ottawa Canal ever reach reality it must pass through the French River just here and necessarily contribute immensely to the settlement, development and prosperity of the district.

Accompanying this report are the accounts, plan and field notes of survey, all of which will, I trust, be found satisfactory to the Department.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

(Signed), J. W. FITZGERALD,

Ontario Land Surveyor.

The Hon'able E. J. DAVIS,
Commissioner Crown Lands,
Toronto.

TOWNSHIP OF FIRSTBROOK.

DISTRICT OF NIPISSING.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Nov. 16th, 1901.

SIR,—I have the honor to report that, in accordance with your instructions dated the 20th day of July, 1901, I have completed the survey and sub-division of the Township of Firstbrook in the District of Nipissing.

Leaving the city on August 7th last, I proceeded by Canadian Pacific Railway to Temiscaming Station, and thence by steamer Meteor to Haileybury, near the head of Lake Temiscaming. From this place I reached the Township of Firstbrook by wagon road to Sharpe's Lake in the second concession of Bucke, and thence by an old lumber road to the west boundary of Bucke, which is also the east boundary of Firstbrook.

I commenced my survey at the southeast angle of the township, where I found a tamarac post planted, as described in Ontario Land Surveyor Niven's field notes of out-lines of townships at the head of Lake Temiscaming, 1886. From this point, having taken observations for azimuth, I ran the south boundary due west astronomically, I then measured off the depths of concessions eighty chains each and ran the concession lines due west astronomically. I re-opened and re-blazed the east boundary, and from this measured off on the concession lines lots forty chains in width and ran the side lines between lots two and three, four and five, etc., and the west boundary of the township due north astronomically. The diagram entitled "Plan of Survey" in the field notes shows the lines on which the intervals of eighty chains were measured, the points of commencing the lines and the direction in which they were surveyed. I re-opened and re-blazed the north boundary opposite lots one and two and such other portions as were necessary in order to chain to the lakes on this boundary and make a traverse of them.

I took observations for azimuth each forenoon and afternoon when the weather permitted, and corrected my bearings whenever any appreciable error was discovered. The details of a number of these observations are entered in the field notes. The magnetic variation is nine and one half degrees west in the southeast portion of the township, and seven and one half degrees west at the extreme north-west angle, averaging about nine degrees west. The only marked local attraction was on the line between lots two and three in the fifth concession, where the variation reached sixteen degrees west.

I planted posts on the fronts of concessions and on the north boundary where these were intersected by the east and west boundaries, and by the side lines between lots two and three, four and five, etc., and also on the fronts of concessions at the angles between lots one and two, three and four, etc. These posts were marked with the numbers of the lots and concessions which they were intended to govern, that is, on the east and west sides with the numbers of the adjoining lots, and on the north side with the numbers of the concessions of which they marked the front. The posts on the east and west boundaries and on the lines between lots two and three, four and five, etc., were also marked on the south side with the numbers of the concessions of which they marked the rear.

At the south-east, north-east, north-west and south-west angles of the township I planted, in addition to the wooden posts showing the lots and concessions, iron posts one and seven-eighths inches in diameter, on which were cut the names of this and the adjoining townships.

The surface of the township is fairly level, except in the northeast and northwest corners, and on lots eight and nine in the third and fourth concessions, where there are high ridges of rock. The eastern, northern and central portions of the township, comprising about three fourths of the whole, lie within the watershed of Lake Temiscaming, and have a good water supply in the Wabis Creek, and its tributaries Pike Creek and Spring Creek. The land along these creeks is very well adapted for agricultural purposes.

The soil generally is sandy loam, and along Spring creek this has a substratum of clay. The area of exposed rock is comparatively small.

The entire township is thickly, but not heavily timbered. The district has apparently been burned over forty or forty five years ago, and is now covered with a growth of jack-pine, poplar, tamarac, spruce, birch and balsam up to twelve and fifteen inches in diameter, and scattered white pine of larger size, the latter being found almost entirely to the west of the watershed of the Montreal River. Spruce is more abundant around Moose Lake than in other parts of the township. The tamarac is either dead or dying.

Moose, bear, partridge and duck were seen during the survey.

I found no indications of economic minerals.

There were no squatters in the township. I am informed at the present time, however, that of a considerable number of settlers who have recently gone into the Temiscaming country, about one dozen have gone into the Township of Firstbrook, and located claims since the close of my survey on September 13th. I have no doubt that the township, lying only six miles from Lake Temiscaming, and being on or near the line of the proposed railway from North Bay, will soon be taken up.

Access to the township from Lake Temiscaming is at present by way of Sharpe's Lake. Should the road now constructed four miles west from Haileybury along the line between the third and fourth concessions of Bucke be extended north between lots four and five in the fourth concession and thence west between the fourth and fifth concessions of Bucke and Firstbrook, it would at once open up the best part of the latter township.

From my observations and inquiries in the Township of Bucke, I found that those settlers who had given their attention to agriculture had been very successful. Good crops of timothy, clover, fall wheat, potatoes, beans and turnips are raised, and I have seen some excellent gardens as well. The snow disappears from the clearings about the middle of April, and the frosts are over about the 24th of May. Fall ploughing is carried on until the middle of November or the first of December.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

(Signed)

Ontario Land Surveyor.

TOWNSHIP OF LATCHFORD.

DISTRICT OF NIPISSING.

PETERBOROUGH, Ontario, December 6th, 1900.

SIR,—I have the honor to report on the survey of the Township of Latchford, in the Nipissing District, made by me last season under your instructions of 26th of June.

I commenced the survey as directed at the southwest angle, which was marked by iron and cedar posts for southeast angle of the Township of Falconer, surveyed in 1896.

On the northeast face of the iron post I cut the name Latchford. On the iron post marking the junction corners of the northeast angle of Falconer and southeast angle of London, I cut on the east side the name Latchford.

The two iron posts supplied me by the Department for defining the north and south ends of the line dividing Latchford and Bertram I cut on the west sides the name Latchford and on the east sides Bertram, placing both in right positions properly mounded as directed.

Owing to the numerous bays and configuration generally of the French River at this place, the lines did not quite come out as shown on the projected sketch, but in a way that fits the situation just the same. Having cleared out, chained and checked the boundary line and posts between Falconer and London on the west side, and Latchford on the east side, and taken meridional observations, I proceeded with the survey in the usual practical way to completion.

The frequent interruptions by water, and consequent delay in making the necessary trigonometrical calculations, retarded considerably the progress of the work. For all lots having broken fronts, the posts for them have been planted, and where necessary, mounded in the manner shown in the sketches accompanying field notes. As will be understood by examination of the field notes, the township is flat or gently undulating, the surface being in no place hilly or broken. The soil in the lower parts is sand loam of average depth and fertility, fairly fit for settlement and farming purposes, while on the higher parts it is lighter and more sandy and stony.

The present timber growth is young and small, jack pine, spruce, tamarac, birch, and poplar being the prevailing kinds; red and white pine of equal growth are scattered over the township.

The boundary line between this township and Bertram passes southwards through Island A in the channel of the French River, each part going with its respective township.

Contiguous to the island marked B on plan and north and south of it are shallow rapids, each falling about two and one-half feet in so many chains.

On the east side, where the river narrows to about twenty links, there is a fall of five feet in one chain. These rapids are shown on the plan. They are the only rapids fronting the township and are the first out of Lake Nipissing. The river banks are mostly granite rock and vary from five to ten feet or more above the ordinary river height.

The water in this branch of the river is deep; even in some of the remote bays it is fifteen to twenty feet.

The Okickendawt Island—Indian Reserve—fronts the river along the south side of the township. It is specially noticeable for the large quantity of splendid pine upon it which is always jealously guarded from fire and other waste by the Indians in possession.

In concluding this report I would say that although the township is not quite an ideal one for agricultural purposes on a large scale, it ranks in that respect equal to the average township in the District, and coupled with its superior attractions in other respects will eventually become a thriving settlement.

The accounts, field notes and plan are herewith submitted and will be found, I hope, satisfactory.

The Hon'able E. J. DAVIS,
Commissioner Crown Lands,
Toronto.

Your obedient servant,

TOWNSHIP OF CONMEE.

DISTRICT OF THUNDER BAY.

PORT ARTHUR, ONTARIO, 10th Oct, 1901.

Sir,—I have the honor to report that in accordance with your instructions, I have completed the survey of the residue of the Township of Conmee.

I commenced the survey at a point on the line between lots B and C, concession five, due north eighty chains from the front of concession five and ran the front of concession six due west to the south-east corner of mining location B. J. 128. At this point I found Ontario Land Surveyor Russell had laid out mining locations to the north and from the south-west corner of B. J. 128, west to township boundary. My line for the front of concession six ran slightly south of B. J. 128, and as Russell had produced the south boundary of B. J. 128 west to the boundary, I adopted his line as the north limit of concession five, and planted posts at each intersection of the lines run in concession five. The length of these lines and of all others in the fifth concession are shown on plan and in field notes.

The line in front of concession seven ended in lot seven at the east boundary of R. 703. The line in front of concession eight ended at the west boundary of lot ten, where I found mining location R. 713; also that all the space between this, south and west, had been surveyed into mining locations. This caused me to plant the iron post (intended for the boundary) at the south-west corner of lot ten, concession eight. It was marked lot ten on the east side, and concession seven on the south, concession eight on the north side. All the side lines were run north to the south boundary of the Dawson road lots, and posts planted marked concession number on south, and lot number on east and west sides: this boundary caused a great deal of trouble, but was found in every case; also some of the posts, where fire had destroyed them. As substantial posts as could be got were planted on concession lines at all lot corners, and marked with the concession numbers on north and south sides at intersection of side lines run. The half mile posts were marked with the concession number on the north side only. Iron posts properly marked were planted alongside wooden ones in front of concession five, between lots A-1, six-seven, and at the south-west corner of lot twelve, on the front of concession eight, between lots A-1, six-seven, and at the south-west corner of lot ten, and at the intersection of the south boundary of the Dawson road lots with the west boundary of the township, all marked with their proper numbers by a cold chisel. Frequent observations were taken on eastern elongation of Polaris. The land found fit for farming was chiefly on the fifth concession, and south part of concession six, with a few tracts in the village to the north, mostly of a sandy loam, free from stones and easily cleared, being covered with scrub and small poplars. The north part of the township is very hilly and rocky, some of the hills being from four hundred to five hundred feet high. Numerous small streams were found which, owing to the wet spring, had considerable water in them. The township has, with the exception of tracts at the south-west corner, and near the Kaministiquia River, been burnt over several times, and is now covered with a dense growth of scrub and small poplar. The compass variation was very irregular, varying from sixty degrees west to sixty degrees east, and constantly changing.

Traces of game were plentiful, namely, red deer, cariboo, moose, bear and partridge.

A plan and field notes accompany this report.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

Ontario Land Surveyor.

RONDEAU PROVINCIAL PARK.

MORPETH, P. O., Dec. 31st, 1901.

To the HonorableThe Commissioner of Crown Lands.

SIR:—I have the honor to submit this my report for the year 1901, as caretaker and ranger of the Rondeau Provincial Park.

The Park as a summer resort is steadily gaining in popularity as time goes on, and this year marked a decided increase in the number of campers as well as in the attendance at the many picnics held here. The pavilion erected three years ago for dancing, etc., has this summer proven a greater attraction than ever before.

During the year we have sent out over eighty pheasants to favorable parts of the country for stocking purposes, and a few pair are yet to spare. Their enemies, foxes, weasels, etc., are numerous as ever, but there are trappers at work in the bush, and we hope by spring to have the number of vermin considerably diminished. We ourselves have been able to capture in the vicinity of the bird enclosure a large number of skunks, weasels and raccoons.

The deer have thriven well, and during the year two young fawn have been added to their numbers, and also a doe and fawn sent from A'gonquin Park.

It is a great benefit to the poor of the neighborhood to be allowed the privilege of cleaning up the tops and limbs of the trees left by Mr. Coates after taking away the sawlogs, cut from the dead and down timber which he purchased from the Government.

Heretofore the Government have employed a man to patrol the Park and Eau shore during the hunting season, but this year his services were dispensed with without any loss to the game in the bush. The people are becoming educated to respect the Park regulations, and the better class of sportsmen assist us in the protection of the game. Ducks have come to the Eau in larger flocks than for three or four years, but have been hard to capture, as they stayed so short a time.

Work has been begun on the clearance of fifteen acres more to be added to the original picnic grounds. When the new road and other improvements have been completed, they will make this the most attractive park in Ontario.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

ISAAC GARDINER,

Ranger, Rondeau Provincial Park.

ALGONQUIN NATIONAL PARK.

MOWAT, January 13, 1902.

To the HonorableThe Commissioner of Crown Lands :

SIR,—As is customary, I respectfully beg to hand you herewith report on the Algonquin National Park for the year 1901.

The Park staff is composed of eleven rangers besides the superintendent. The month of January, 1901, was mostly taken up getting wood at headquarters, making sleighs, snowshoes, etc. Then the rangers went out in pairs to their several sections, each man drawing a sled loaded with provisions. February, March and April were spent patrolling the Park. During the month of May the rangers returned to headquarters by canoe, leaving sleds and snow-shoes in the shelter houses for next winter. In the months of June and July the rangers were employed, except when prevented by fires, in improving grounds and buildings at headquarters, cutting out portages, etc. August was principally devoted to building new shelter houses, repairing those already built, and cutting out portages. In September, most of the rangers again took canoes, and those who have sections farthest removed from headquarters carried with them supplies sufficient to last till they came out at Christmas on snow-shoes, bringing their sleds with them to take back supplies for the spring.

We have built two new shelter houses, one on Maple Lake and one on Shirley Lake. Owing to the heavy windstorms of last year we have had an unusual amount of cleaning out to do on portages.

We have built five large fishing boats, which have been put on the following lakes : Cache Lake, Cranberry Lake, Source Lake, Head Lake and Hilliard Lake. We built two new bark canoes, made several sleds and snow-shoes, erected two large wood-sheds, raised the partly fallen kitchen at the superintendent's house, dug cellar under it, dug drain from house to lake, lined up cellar and finished kitchen, built winter quarters for pheasants, Belgian hares, etc., did a good deal of clearing up along the lake front, took out stumps around headquarters and put in a number of spruce and maple trees. My men have done good work and have succeeded wonderfully in keeping out trappers, when you consider the large area they have to cover. Our deer, pheasants, etc., have done well. We raised two very fine fawns last summer.

There have been a large number of visitors to the Park, all of whom have expressed themselves as delighted with the success that has attended the efforts of the Government to protect the game and fur-bearing animals. Deer are very numerous everywhere, and can be seen at almost all times in large numbers from the train as you pass through. Beaver, mink, otter, etc., are also very plentiful, and have increased wonderfully. Wolves, I regret to say, are very bold and numerous this winter, and the rangers have put out a large quantity of poison to destroy them. Moose are plentiful, and are frequently seen by the rangers and tourists.

The black bass put into these lakes during the past two years have increased far beyond my most extreme hopes, and are very abundant. Young bass can be caught in any of the lakes in great numbers.

We have had very little trouble with bush fires, and no damage has been done to the green timber.

Lumbering is going on in the Park at several points, but we never had less trouble with the employees of the lumber firms than we have had during the past year, and I feel that the different license holders are co-operating with us as they never did before.

Small-pox has visited some of the camps in the Park this season and there are several cases reported at Lake of Two Rivers. I think some strong measures should be taken to stamp out the disease in these camps.

The St. Anthony Lumber Company have surveyed a line from Whitney to Great Opeongo lake with the intention of running a log road through to haul their timber out by rail. The line is graded to the Park boundary, and the contract calls for the completion of the line to Opeongo Lake by August next.

My staff have just finished cutting and hauling a large supply of firewood. They will now fill the ice house and then go out to their several sections until spring.

Your obedient servant,

G. W. BARTLETT.

Superintendent.

THE ALGONQUIN NATIONAL PARK OF ONTARIO.

(Written for the Canadian Institute by J. A. DUFF.)

This paper had its origin one fine August morning—not the sultry, steaming August of the heated city—but the cool, fragrant, midsummer morning of our northern lakes and forests.

I had returned from the Great Opeongo to Cache Lake, Algonquin Park, and nearing that the President of the Canadian Institute and Professor Ellis were camping at the lower end of Cache Island, I paddled across the lake to visit them. In the course of our conversation I spoke of the probability of my remaining in the Park throughout the winter, and then Mr. Bain proposed that I should employ a portion of my time in writing a description of Algonquin Park for the Canadian Institute. In doing so I am conscious that my description falls far short of the reality, but I hope that it may be the means of creating a greater interest in the magnificent resting place and pleasure ground which lies neglected at our doors.

In a park or pleasure ground, the natural scenery is one of the most important features, and probably the first to attract attention; but the pleasure derived from any locality does not depend upon the scenery alone. The climate, the animal and vegetable life, former associations, and many other things, exert an influence, real and powerful, though perhaps not always appreciated.

The predominant charm of Algonquin Park is not the scenery, so varied and picturesque, nor the forest with its clean and open hardwood, its crowded mixed timber and its solemn pineries, nor the lakes teeming with fish, nor the climate, nor the beasts and birds—but the greatest and abiding charm is the harmony with which every phase of nature conspires to please.

“Age cannot wither her; nor custom stale
Her infinite variety.”

The Algonquin National Park of Ontario was established in 1893. It originally comprised 18 townships in the Nipissing District, “lying near and enclosing the headwaters of the Muskoke, Madawaska, Amable du Fond, Petewawa, and South Rivers.”

By an Act of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, these townships were withdrawn from sale and settlement, and were “reserved and set apart as a public park and forest reservation, fish and game preserve, health resort and pleasure ground for the benefit, advantage, and enjoyment of the people of the Province.”

In the following year the boundary was extended so as to include portions of the five adjacent townships on the west and part of one on the north, so that, as at present constituted, the Park contains “993,489 acres of land and 115,894 acres of water, or 1,109,383 acres in all, equal to 1,733 square miles. This area is approximately 44 miles in length from north to south and 40 miles in width from east to west.” The territory thus set apart is larger than the County of York, but its boundaries do not mark the limits of the forest. The whole district for about 100 miles square is very sparsely settled, and is so ill adapted to agriculture that it is likely to remain in its present condition. This large area of forest surrounding the Park exerts an important influence upon the climate, the conditions of animal life, etc.; so that the Algonquin Park would be better described as a reservation within the forest than as a forest reserve.

The Canada Atlantic Railway traverses the southwest portion for 30 miles, from Rainy Lake at the western boundary to near Rock Lake at the southern. Cache Lake station, where the Park headquarters are located, is 168 miles by rail from Ottawa, and 210 miles from Toronto, by way of Scotia Junction.

All the railway stations are located at picturesque lakes, where those who wish to be near the railway may find good camping grounds, and from which canoe routes lead in all directions through the Park. There is a daily mail and express train to and from Ottawa so that the postal facilities are very good. One peculiar feature which sometimes occasions considerable inconvenience is that the name of the post-office is in each case different from that of the railway station. Thus the post-office at Rainy Lake is Brennen; at Brulè Lake, Sheppard; at Canoe Lake, Algonquin Park, and at Cache Lake, Mowat.

The Park is under the control of the Department of Crown Lands, and information regarding the regulations for camping, fishing, etc., may be obtained by application to the Department or to the resident Superintendent, Mr G. W. Bartlett.

The Superintendent has jurisdiction over the Park, with all the powers, rights and privileges of a police magistrate, for the purpose of enforcing law and order and the regulations of the Algonquin National Park Act. He is assisted by the Park rangers who act under his instructions, patrolling the Park for the purpose of protecting the forest and game, and preventing any infringements of the law. The Superintendent and rangers have their headquarters at Cache Lake, (Mowat P. O.), and visitors to the Park will find them uniformly courteous and obliging, and always willing to furnish information and assist tourists in any way within their power.

There are no hotels or tourists' boarding houses, and tourists entering the Park should provide themselves with tents, canoes, and camping outfit, and any cooks or guides they may require. The regulations require the employment of guides duly licensed for the purpose, the names and addresses of whom may be obtained from the Superintendent.

The dominant characteristic of scenery is a quiet beauty, restful and refreshing to the wearied nerves of the toiler in our too strenuous civilization. There are lakes everywhere, few of them large, but all of them beautiful, their clear cool waters well stocked with trout. They lie like mirrors amongst the wooded hills. The streams connecting them are for the most part navigable by canoes and the portages are neither long nor difficult. The divides between the different water systems are easily crossed and there are often two or more alternative routes between two given points.

The shores of the lakes are generally high and well covered with trees, and considering the large area of water, there is very little swampy land. On many of the lakes, and especially on the Great Opeongo—the largest and most magnificent lake in the Park—there are fine stretches of sandy beaches, forming ideal camping grounds.

The Park is well wooded except in the few places which have not recovered from forest fires. Birch and maple, spruce and balsam, cedar and hemlock, are the prevailing trees. The soil and climate seem specially adapted to the birch, both the black and white varieties being very abundant and growing to magnificent proportions.

The towering, wind-swept pines, which circled the lakes and crowned the ridges, have been felled by the lumbermen or are being rapidly cut down. Much of the beauty and all of the majesty of the forest goes with the pine.

Wild flowers and ferns, plants and mosses are very plentiful and in great variety. I am told that nearly one thousand different varieties have been identified within the Park. The opportunities for the observation of wild animals and birds are better than where these creatures are not protected. Being present in large numbers, and less in dread of being hunted and killed, they are seen more frequently and do not vanish so suddenly as in places where their lives are in greater danger. As the Park was not established until 1893, it will be two years yet before the decennial census of wild animals will be taken, but there are many indications of a rapid increase in the population. On any of the lakes, the red deer may be seen feeding among the reeds and water-lilies or walking along the beach.

The moose are not so plentiful as the red deer, but are increasing steadily. The marten, mink and otter are doing well and the beaver has built houses and dams all through the Park and has begun to colonize the surrounding forest. It should afford great satisfaction to every Canadian to know that the hard-working, home building beaver—the emblem of Canada—has escaped the destruction that seemed inevitable and is once more firmly established in Ontario. He is very shy, and all you may see of him is a ball of fur and a splash as he dives into the water when you happen to steal upon him. They know how to fell a tree and build a house, and their dams are constructed in accordance with the most approved principles of engineering. The intelligence displayed in the selection of the site and the disposal of the material commands admiration.

There is a dam at the head of White's Lake, about three miles from the Park headquarters, where the beaver took advantage of a large rock in midstream which they used as a buttress for their dam. If they find a fallen tree in a suitable place they build around it, and sometimes cut one down for this purpose, and in all their works they show remarkable aptitude for taking advantage of everything that will lessen their labor or improve their works.

The climate is pleasant and salubrious. It is about twenty degrees colder than Toronto, summer and winter, but on account of the large area of forest, is less subject to sudden changes.

The altitude is from 1,800 to 2,000 feet above the sea. The air is light and invigorating, fragrant with pine and balsam, ferns and flowers.

No words of mine can picture the glory of the autumn with its frosty nights and sunny days—when the maple and birch have turned to red and gold, their brilliancy enhanced by a deep green setting of spruce and hemlock. Nor can I describe how pleasant it is in winter, to feel the stillness of the ice-bound lakes and forests filled with snow. Things like these must be seen and experienced, and to those who would have me tell what manner of place is Algonquin Park, I can only say, "Words cannot describe it, come and see."

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE
DIRECTOR OF FORESTRY

FOR THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

1900-1901.

PRINTED BY ORDER OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO.

TORONTO:
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY L. K. CAMERON,
Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty.
1902.

Toronto, January 24th, 1902.

Hon. E. J. Davis, Commissioner of Crown Lands :

Sir,—I have the honor to transmit herewith the report of the Bureau of Forestry for the years 1900-1901. The first portion of the report deals with the condition and management of the Forest Reserves, comprising an account of the Temagami and Sibley Reserves, and presenting some suggestions as to the course to be pursued with regard to other tracts of country presenting similar characteristics. A paper by Mr. J. A. DeCew on "The Production of Tannin in Ontario," is appended, which recommends a method for the utilization of the hemlock bark now frequently wasted in lumbering operations.

The subject of the overclearance of the older portion of the Province, which has hitherto received less attention than the broader aspects of the forestry problem as applicable to the Crown Domain, has been investigated with the aid of the latest obtainable statistics of the municipal returns, courteously placed at my disposal before publication by the Bureau of Industries. An analysis of these returns is presented, showing that the proportion of wooded to cleared land in most localities is steadily decreasing. A compilation of the legislation enacted in many of the States of the American Union for the encouragement of tree-culture and forest maintenance is given, which may afford some suggestions for legislative action to remedy the evil.

A paper contributed by Mr. W. H. Hutt on the management of the Farmers' Wood Lot presents some considerations which should appeal to the intelligent self-interest of rural land-owners in favor of woodland preservation.

I have the honor to be, Sir, Your obedient servant,

THOS. SOUTHWORTH, Director of Forestry.

THE FORESTRY SITUATION IN ONTARIO.

In a general survey of the forestry situation in Ontario there is reason both for congratulation and for dissatisfaction. As pointed out in previous reports, the forestry problem presents two distinct phases, coincident to some extent with the geographical divisions of the Province. In view of the entirely dissimilar character of the factors to be taken into account in Northern and Southern Ontario, respectively, it is necessary to repeat and emphasize this distinction to ensure anything like clearness of statement.

Ten years ago by far the most serious question was connected with the non-arable lands of the Crown, the danger from the loss of tree cover in the older settled part of the Province not being so urgent as to cause grave alarm. To-day the position is reversed. We have gone far towards the solution of the forestry problem as regards the Crown Lands, whilst the danger from denudation in Southern Ontario has not only increased by reason of the steady diminution in the area of woodland, but is becoming more and more apparent to the general public. The two propositions respecting the application of forestry principles to the management of Crown Lands, and to the remnants of forest or areas of waste land in private hands, are so essentially different, that it will, as in former reports, be well to treat them separately under the respective heads of Crown Forests and Farm Forests.

CROWN FORESTS.

The report of the Bureau for 1899 contained an exhaustive summary of the legislation bearing on the forestry problem with regard to the Crown Lands from the days of the French regime to the date of compilation. In that report the development of the existing method of treating the forest lands of the public domain was somewhat fully traced. In order to arrive at a fair understanding of the present situation and to realize what has been accomplished in the direction of establishing a practical forestry system, adhering as closely to scientific principles as the economic condition of the continent will permit, it may be well briefly to restate some of the successive stages of that development. We shall thus be in a position to approach intelligently the questions arising in the course of its progress towards completion, and to consider in the light of past experience the effect and tendency of proposed methods of Government action.

In the early days of settlement in Ontario the colonist preceded the lumberman. The simple wants of the settlers for building purposes were easily supplied by the forests which they were compelled to destroy in the course of clearing their farms. As population increased and towns and villages sprang up, with an increasing demand for timber for industrial purposes, it became necessary to look further afield for a supply, and the lumberman sought and obtained the privilege of cutting timber on the public lands. During a short period, before the value of this concession was fully appreciated, and while the profits of the business were comparatively small, this privilege was a monopoly in the hands of a few favored individuals, who paid nothing into the public treasury as a return therefor. This state of affairs naturally gave rise to much dissatisfaction, and resulted in illegal lumbering operations on the part of unlicensed lumbermen, who, being unable to enter into legitimate competition with the licensees, could not be prevented from carrying on an extensive illicit traffic. To remedy these abuses and to secure to the public some portion of the value of the timber a system of timber dues was adopted, licenses being issued from year to year, authorizing the cutting of timber within specified limits, subject to the payment of fixed rates.

At the outset of the system the principle, which has ever since been adhered to, of granting merely the right to cut timber while retaining in the Crown the title to the land was adopted. In the United States, on the other hand, the practice generally, if not universally, followed was to dispose absolutely of large areas of heavily timbered land, giving the purchasers often for a comparatively trifling consideration the title to the soil in fee simple. The consequence is that to-day the Province of Ontario occupies a far more favorable position as regards reforestation than do the adjoining States, where the question has become one of equal or greater urgency. Such of the lands as have been lumbered and burned over, and by reason of their comparative infertility, have not been occupied by settlers, still remain in the hands of the Government, and are available for timber culture on a large scale, whereas in many of the United States similar operations cannot be undertaken without repurchasing at a great cost from their present possessors the waste lands which have been denuded of their forest vegetation.

The next stage in the development of the system was the gradual introduction of the plan of disposing of timber licenses by public auction. It was found that in many cases more than one lumberman was anxious to secure the same timber limit. At first introduced tentatively in cases where there were two or more applicants for one limit, it was finally adopted as the rule in all cases. The result was to secure to the public treasury by free competition the full value of lumbering privileges, while doing justice to all individuals desiring to engage in the lumber trade upon even terms with their rivals. Since the adoption of the auction system the premiums upon timber limits have steadily risen with the growing demand for lumber, causing the receipts from Crown Lands to be by far the most considerable source of Provincial revenue, with the exception of the Dominion subsidy. Under the auction system of disposing of timber limits the successful bidder agrees to pay in cash the amount of his bid upon the tacit understanding, that the annual license will be renewed from year to year for such time as may be necessary or reasonable to allow the removal of the timber for which the cash sum, usually termed "bonus," was given in part payment. This sum is based on the estimated quantity of timber on the territory, and its stumpage value at the time of sale, less the fixed charge in the form of timber dues to be paid when the timber is cut.

THE LAND FOR THE SETTLER.

The primary consideration in reserving the title of the land in the hands of the Crown when disposing of the right to cut timber was that the Government might be enabled to offer the inducement of free or cheap land to incoming settlers. The lumberman acted as the pioneer of settlement. In every locality where the character of the soil was such as to insure its productiveness the removal of the more valuable timber was followed by the throwing open of the land for settlement. Many of those employed in the lumber camps took advantage of the opportunity to secure homesteads in the back country. Lumbering operations, moreover, built up small centers of industry and trade which offered the farmers local markets for their produce, or the means of procuring temporary employment. The conditions of the timber licenses were framed so as to leave the Government free to withdraw from the territory, included the land required for settlement purposes, and allow homesteads to be located.

NON-ARABLE LAND.

As lumbering operations were pushed further to the north, however, the wave of advancing settlement was arrested. A section of country was reached which held out little inducement for the agricultural settler. There was but little fertile soil, such tracts as occurred being small and isolated. Much of the land was infertile, being rocky, swampy or broken. The consequence was that this region, after the timber had been removed either by the lumberman or by the devastating fires which frequently followed upon the occupation of a new territory, remained unsettled excepting in a few neighborhoods, and being only fitted to produce timber, remained unproductive. So long as the land was of a quality to invite and repay settlement the damage caused by forest fires, though productive of much loss to the public and to the lumberman, was of considerably less consequence, than when the devastated country was of a different character. In the earlier settlement of the country lumbering was regarded as merely a temporary industry, incident to the clearing of land, and where the soil in any event would have been, sooner or later, stripped of its natural vegetation to prepare it for cultivation, the ravages of a bush fire inflicted no permanent injury to the country's interests. It was far different, however, in regard to the districts where farming, except in scattered neighborhoods was an impossibility, and the only hope of maintaining productiveness was in retaining the forest growth so as to provide for successive crops of pine, and other valuable timber. Obviously an entirely different system of management of the Crown Lands was called for in connection with the non-agricultural regions than that which had been followed with fair success in dealing with the timbered arable lands. If the former were to retain any value as sources of public wealth or factors of industrial development, the regulations with regard to their treatment must vary greatly from those applicable to the territory in which the forest was regarded merely as a temporary source of profit, to be exploited as soon as possible to make way for agriculture and population.

THE GREAT OBSTACLE.

The first and most formidable obstacle to such a new departure, based upon the principle of retaining the woodland and managing it on forestry principles, lay in the liability to fire, which by experience and usage had come to be regarded as practically inseparable from lumbering operations. The probability of sustaining heavy losses by forest fires were a strong incentive to the lumberman to adopt wasteful and destructive methods in cutting the smaller trees, and making as thorough a clearance of everything, having commercial value as possible, regardless of its effect on the forest productiveness of his limit. He might reasonably defend his course on the ground of the extreme unlikelihood that any trees spared would ultimately escape the flames.

PROTECTIVE MEASURES.

In 1885 the fire ranging system was adopted, the subsequent extension and development of which has proved highly effective in lessening the danger from this source. Since that time forest fires have become much less frequent, many incipient conflagrations having been suppressed with small loss at an early stage. The success of this measure has rendered feasible the treatment of the Crown domain on forestry principles, and enlists the intelligent self-interest of the lumbermen in favor of putting their trade upon a permanent and durable basis.

FOREST REPRODUCTION.

Fire being kept out, the forest will perpetuate itself, and in process of time even the wastes which have been completely denuded of their timber will be reclothed with natural vegetation. Contrary to what was formerly the generally received opinion, experience has abundantly demonstrated the fact that—excepting in cases in which repeated fires have not only destroyed old and young trees, but the seeds in the ground—a pine forest, when cut down, will be succeeded by a young growth of the same species. The pines may at first be dominated by trees of quicker-growing varieties, but will eventually overtake and outgrow them. The establishment of this principle beyond controversy greatly simplifies the question of reforestation. So far as very extensive tracts of burned and lumbered over territory are concerned, all that is necessary is to keep out fire and protect the young pines now in various stages of growth. To preserve the timber in such areas as are manifestly unadapted for settlement, and to ensure the reforestation of similar districts which have been wholly or partially stripped by the axe, or by fire, the Government has adopted the policy of withdrawing these areas from settlement and setting them apart as permanent forest reserves.

FOREST RESERVES.

The first step in this direction was the setting apart of the Algonquin National Park in the southern part of the Nipissing District in 1893, which, with subsequent additions, comprises an area of 1,109,383 acres. This park is not, strictly speaking, a forest reserve, as the territory is under license, but as no settlement is allowed within it, it largely partakes of that character.

In the year 1897 the Director of Forestry drew attention to the large area of land which, having been cut over, and being unsuitable for tillage, was unproductive, and urged that both for climatic and economic reasons much of it should be set aside as forest reserves. It was also recommended that a Royal Commission should be appointed to investigate the question. In accordance with this recommendation the Administration in the same year appointed a Royal Commission to inquire and report on the subject of restoring and preserving the growth of white pine and other timber trees on lands not adapted for settlement. This report, based upon a personal examination of large tracts of cut and burned over land, strongly sustained the view of the Director of Forestry. In pursuance of their recommendations the Legislature in 1898 adopted the Forest Reserves Act, empowering the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to set apart tracts of such land as forest reserves as might from time to time be deemed advisable.

FOREST RESERVES ACT.

In accordance with the provisions of this measure a tract of land comprising some 80,000 acres in the Counties of Frontenac and Addington, and an area of about 45,000 acres in the Township of Sibley, on the north shore of Lake Superior, were withdrawn from settlement and constituted forest reserves. Both these tracts had been lumbered over, and subsequently swept by fire, and in each a new and vigorous growth of pine had begun to reclothe the soil in many places. With due precautions to exclude fire this will before long replace the original forest, and furnish timber supplies in the future.

A more important step was taken recently by the setting apart of the pine-bearing region around Lake Temagami, comprising 1,400,000 acres. Unlike the previously constituted reserves, this area had never been under license. It contains an extensive tract of white pine, the quantity of the timber now standing being variously, but perhaps imperfectly, estimated at from 3,000,000,000 to 5,000,000,000 feet, board measure. In all probability if this region had been dealt with in the ordinary way followed where pine-covered land is presumed to be available for settlement, the presence of squatters and others following upon the opening up of the country would have been followed by devastating fires. The attractive character of the locality to tourists and sportsmen, who resort thither in increasing numbers, rendered it all the more advisable to place it under strict regulations, so as to avoid this danger. Further reference to the various forest reserves is made elsewhere in this report.

As the settlement and development of New Ontario progresses, and more detailed information is received as to the characteristics and capacities of the country, further action in the same direction may be taken from time to time, keeping in view the principle that land which can only be profitably utilized in the growing of timber ought to be permanently devoted to that purpose, without being suffered to lose its distinctively forest character, which can only be recovered by slow degrees. Perhaps the phase of the question which calls for most attention at present is the disposition to be made of the very large tracts of cut and burned over land of a non-arable character which are still under timber license. Though timber licenses are only granted from year to year, and it is probable that a strict interpretation of the law would give the Government the power to cancel them at any time when the public interest required it, yet as a matter of custom licenses have always been renewed at the option of the holder whenever the land was not required for settlement. Under these circumstances, to undertake to reserve waste lands and allow them to grow up to timber, while leaving the licenses uncanceled would simply be to give the licensee a perpetual tenure and allow him to receive the advantage of harvesting the second growth of pine, paying therefor only the fixed stumpage dues, which was certainly never contemplated at the time the contract was entered into. Were the land needed for settlement there would be no difficulty in the way, as no supposed vested right of the lumberman in the future increment of his limit is recognized in such cases. Recent timber sales have been made under the condition that the licenses should not be renewed beyond a fixed term, which will avoid any such difficulty arising in the future. But for the claims of the timber licensees still extant in respect of territory from which the mature timber has for some time disappeared, the forest reserve system could be largely extended. There are considerable tracts of country on the north shore of Georgian Bay, and lying along the Canadian Pacific Railway, between Pembroke and Mattawa, which are being reclothed with a growth of young pine, which could advantageously be set aside as timber reserves if the licenses covering them were cancelled or were placed on a different basis as to dues. As has been previously pointed out, the amount paid by way of bonus in the sale of timber berths at auction was based on the quantity and stumpage value of the pine timber standing on the territory at the time.

Although licenses up to and including the sale of 1887 embraced other timber than pine, the market for other woods was then so limited that they were not taken into account by lumbermen in estimating the value of the limit. In the sale held in 1892, and those occurring subsequently, only pine timber was included in the license. The Province has therefore received a much larger proportion of the value of the timber from the later sales, than was formerly the case. Where licenses have been in existence for many years—and there are a number now in force issued before Confederation—it is fair to assume that the timber on which the original purchase was based has long since been removed, and that further renewals of the license give the limit-holder the advantage of securing a crop not then in existence at much less than its value represented by the stumpage dues.

While it is quite true that in many of the limits disposed of years ago the standing timber on which the bonus was paid has been removed, and the limit-holders are now cutting timber that has reached maturity since the original purchase was made, it cannot be overlooked that in some cases these limits have changed hands. The present owners have paid for them on the basis of their value at the time of transfer, subject to the fixed stumpage dues payable to the Government. To cancel these licenses would appear to be an injustice to the holders, although, in view of the obvious advantage to them of having their limits placed in permanent reserves, they could wisely consent to pay a higher stumpage rate to the Crown than is at present imposed.

PRIVATE FORESTRY ON CROWN LANDS.

As before stated there are large areas of timbered land under license, which, owing to the character of the soil, are not likely to be utilized for general farming purposes. Some of these limits are being operated by the licensees on conservative forestry principles, that is to say an attempt is being made to regulate the annual cut so as to approximately equal the annual growth, as far as the special conditions in each case will permit. It is not pretended that these forests are operated with a view to their greatest productivity. Such an undertaking in the mixed forests of Ontario would require the removal of many of the useless or less valuable trees to make room for more profitable varieties. In some cases the more valuable kinds of timber stand so thickly on the ground that extensive thinning would be necessary to secure the maximum of production. In the intensely worked forests of Europe these methods are pursued with great profit, but conditions are so widely different here that such a course would be impracticable or unprofitable, which is much the same thing in forest management. Many sorts of trees and young saplings, which in Europe have sufficient commercial value to make their removal from the forest directly remunerative, have here no value whatever, and hence the thinning out process would entail considerable expense, with no immediate return, and it is doubtful in many cases whether the future gain from the increased growth of the remaining trees would at all approach the cost incurred.

One case came under the observation of the writer in which a "second growth" of young pine was standing so thick as to impede the development of all the trees. It was a forest of long, slender poles, growing so slowly as to defer indefinitely the time when such of them as succeeded in dominating and killing out their competitors would attain the dimensions of merchantable timber. The license-holder was fully aware that in order to enable these pines to assume the normal rate of growth, a considerable proportion of them should be removed, but he also realized that at the then price of red pine the outlay would be unprofitable. In another instance a forest contained considerable quantities of hemlock of good size. This limit was under the old form of license, issued prior to 1888, when all woods were included in the license. The price of this wood was at that time so low that it was not advisable to cut it, and as the output was practically restricted to pine, this tract under operation was gradually becoming a hemlock rather than a pine forest. If the hemlock could have been harvested in such a way that the bark could have been sold for tanning purposes, it would have paid to cut it, but from the location this was impossible. There were no local markets, and no roads passable for wagons on which to haul it to a shipping point. Since that time the price of hemlock timber has advanced sufficiently to make the cutting of the hemlock on this limit profitable, but the bark, which has a commercial value, is not saved, but wasted, and to that extent proper forestry methods are not followed in this case. In this connection the paper on tannins, by Mr. De Cew, appearing elsewhere in this report, will be found of interest. It is true that the making of hemlock extract was condemned by a Parliamentary Committee in 1868, but in the cases under investigation at that time the hemlock extract was manufactured from the bark, while the timber was wasted, the logs being left to rot in the bush. It is doubtless better to sell the bark direct to the tanner where the location of the forest renders this practicable, but when this cannot be done it seems to the writer that the installation of portable extract plants is desirable, if they can be obtained and operated at a cost sufficiently moderate to allow a reasonable profit on the sale of the extract.

It does not seem to be in keeping with the regard to the economy in production characteristic of the modern industrial system, that so considerable an item of our raw material as hemlock bark should be wasted. The importance of hemlock to our tanning industry was shown by the legislation of 1899, by which the exportation of hemlock bark was prohibited, yet large quantities of it are yearly wasted by leaving it on the logs cut in territory remote from a market.

FOREST WASTE.

Another serious problem affecting our forestry operations lies in the disposal of the waste material left by the lumberman. This waste, comprising the tops and branches of the felled trees, constitutes a constant and serious danger, owing to its readily combustible character, which renders it the cause of many forest fires. Its presence also to some extent militates against the proper seeding of the cut-over area. Its removal would necessarily entail some expense, and without some experience it is difficult to determine whether the cost would be offset by the resultant advantage to the forest, in the lessening of the fire risk, and the more rapid seeding and reclothing of the territory from which the waste is removed. In this, as in many other cases, the experience of older countries affords no guide for us. The tops and branches left on the ground after logging have here no commercial value whatever, and to carry them away from the forest would be a very costly proceeding.

FIRE AS A SERVANT.

It is reported that in some cases in Michigan this waste has been removed successfully by fire and at a cost of only ten dollars per square mile, and if this could be done here there is no doubt whatever that it would be profitable and in every way advantageous. Several lumbermen to whom the writer has referred the matter have expressed doubts of the practicability of the plan. So far as I know it has never been tried in Canada except in the case of one operator, in which the circumstances are somewhat unusual. The Rathbun Company of Deseronto in some of their eastern Ontario limits have burned the waste on their cut-over territory for several years, but as the limit is a mixed forest of coniferous and hardwood trees and the company cut trees of all sorts, the waste is not so inflammable as would be the case where only coniferous trees are in question, and the fire can more easily be controlled.

In the Michigan cases referred to the tops and branches were not piled up, but a gang of men with tin coal oil torches either in the early spring as soon as the snow had melted and before the ground had got dry, or else in the fall after heavy rain or the first fall of snow, set fire to each lot of debris as it was left by the loggers. No attempt was made to burn the larger limbs, or the upper part of the trunk, but the needles and small twigs that constitute the fire danger were burned off, and no great difficulty was experienced in controlling the fire.

If in thus burning the refuse the pine "duff" or carpet of needles, existing in an old pine forest to the depth of several inches in some cases, were burned it would greatly enhance the value of the operation. In the investigations of the Forestry Commission in 1897 and 1898 it was noticed that the crop of young pine was much more prolific and vigorous when fire has followed lumbering operations, provided that it had not been repeated so as to destroy the young growth after the removal of the seed-bearing trees. This was no doubt largely due to the failure of the pine seeds to reach the soil owing to the depth of the forest litter. There is little doubt that it would be found, that in the places where the lumbering waste was burned off, the crop of young pine trees following a seed year would be much larger than if the forest litter had been allowed to remain.

It is hoped that a systematic and fair experiment in this line may be conducted at no distant date.

FOREST RESERVES.

ALGONQUIN PARK.

In referring to Forest Reserves the Algonquin National Park is not included, though in some respects it partakes of that character and serves the same purposes. The greater part of the territory embraced in its limits was withdrawn from settlement and created a park or reserve by a special act of Parliament in 1893. Since that time some additions have been made to it, so that it now includes 1,109,383 acres of forest land. In the establishment of the reserve the question of future timber supplies and revenue was not taken into account so much as the preservation of our own fur and game animals by providing an immense breeding ground, and the protection of the sources of the important rivers, whose head waters lie within its boundaries, by keeping the territory under forest cover. At the time the reservation was made much of the area was under license and the rest of it has since been added to the licensed territory. Although the primary objects in withdrawing it from settlement were as above stated, it nevertheless forms an extensive forest reserve. The main purposes of its creation cannot be served except by keeping it permanently in timber, and thus it becomes a forest reserve in the proper meaning of the term, though not one from which the Crown will receive as large a share of the value of the growing timber as from the other reserves created under the general Forest Reserves Act of 1898. Being under license it will be more difficult to enforce restrictive cutting regulations to ensure continuous and rapid reproduction of the crop, but so long as fire is kept out as successfully as has so far been done, there will be growing timber on the reserve.

THE EASTERN RESERVE.

The first reserve created under the Forest Reserves Act of 1898 was established by Order-in-Council in April, 1899, and consists of about 80,000 acres in the rear of the counties of Frontenac and Addington and was referred to at length in the Forestry Report of 1899. The territory was under license to Mr. Isaac Allan and by the agreement between him and the Commissioner he was to have the privilege for five years of removing such mature timber as was covered by his license, but subject to the approval in all cases of the Commissioner of Crown Lands. He is not allowed to operate where the mature timber is scattered and where the operation would seriously damage the young timber. Mr. Allan has exercised due care in his cutting and the growth of the young pine forest on the reserve is very vigorous and promising. Mr. A. W. Wood, the local Crown Timber Agent, was appointed Forest Guardian, and so far, with the assistance of one fire ranger, employed during the dangerous months of the summer, he has succeeded in preventing any serious fires.

Mr. Wood reports that there were two small fires during the past season. One occurred in June in the Township of Abinger, but as the ground was not dry, no difficulty was found in putting it out before any damage was done. The other took place in July on an island in Gull Lake. The season was very dry and hot and about half the island was burned over before the flames were got under control. Mr. Wood attributes the origin of the fire to berry pickers. This reserve is surrounded by settlers who have been in the habit of hunting and fishing within it and constant care is required to guard against fires. It is only fair to state, however, that the settlers now appreciate the future value of the growing timber and are in active sympathy with the effort to protect the reserve.

Owing to the wet weather in September it was not considered necessary to retain the services of the extra fire ranger through the month as usual and he was accordingly discharged at the end of August. The Forest Guardian reports that the growth of pine during the season was good—a height growth of three feet being quite common.

THE SIBLEY RESERVE.

This reserve which lies on the north short of Lake Superior, is the only one so far created in the western part of the Province. At one time it was the scene of considerable activity during the early days of silver mining in that territory and was largely cut over and in some localities burned over. A great deal of the territory on the north shore of Lake Superior was swept by fire so severely and repeatedly many years ago that the forest has been very slow in reproducing itself, but this small reserve escaped the earlier devastation and a quantity of timber was taken off it twenty-five years ago. Early in 1900 the following communication was addressed to the Commissioner of Crown Lands:

“Toronto, February 6th, 1900.

“Sir,—On the north shore of Lake Superior a peninsula extends into the lake, forming on its southern extremity the promontory of Thunder Cape. This peninsula has been surveyed into lots and called the Township of Sibley, containing about 65,000 acres.

“Running from north to south the whole length of the township near the western shore there exists an elevated ridge or mountain chain, terminating in Thunder Cape. The narrow strip of land lying between this ridge and the western shore has been patented for mining lands.

“The eastern slope, which comprises by far the greater part of the township, is covered with a mixed forest of young timber and as it is protected from the northwest winds by the ridge in question it is growing thriftily. There is some white pine in the township large enough to make board timber, but much of it is small and none of it has reached maturity. Applications for permits to cut this young pine have been refused by the Commissioner of Crown Lands. There are no settlers living in the township with the exception of the lighthouse keeper below Thunder Cape and a man employed to look after the lands of the Ontario Mineral Lands Company on the south shore.

“Owing to its isolated position this territory could be easily protected with very little expense, and in time it would become a valuable addition to the timber resources of the Thunder Bay district, which on the territory immediately north of Sibley are not extensive. The accompanying map shows the patented and unpatented lands, the latter comprising about 45,000 acres.

"Aside from its value as a timber farm this township is said to be a sort of winter home for caribou, the big game of that country.

"For the reasons above stated I beg to recommend that the unpatented part of the Township of Sibley as shown on the accompanying map (all those lots uncolored) be created a permanent reserve under the Forest Reserves Act.

"I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

"THOS. SOUTHWORTH, Clerk of Forestry for Ontario.

"Hon. E. J. Davis, Commissioner of Crown Lands, Toronto."

On February 10th the following Order-in-Council was approved by the Lieutenant-Governor:

"Upon consideration of the report of the Clerk of Forestry, dated February 6th, 1900, and upon recommendation of the Honorable the Commissioner of Crown Lands, the committee of the council advise that the portion of the Township of Sibley described in the plan and schedule accompanying the report of the said Clerk of Forestry be set aside as a permanent Forest Reserve under the provisions of the Forest Reserves Act."

The schedule referred to in the report included the following lots in the township, being all the lots not previously patented.

Description of that part of the Township of Sibley proposed for Forest Reserve:

Concession 1, lots 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9; concession 2, lots 1, 2, W 1-2, 3, W 1-2, 4, 5 to 10; concession 3, lots 1 to 10; concession 4, lots 1 to 20; concession 5, lots 1 to 26; concession 6, lots 1 to 28; concession 7, lots 6 to 26; concession 8, lots 9 to 22 and 25, 26; concession 9, lots 12 to 28; concession 10, lots 17 to 28.

Owing to the isolated position of this reserve, which is nearly surrounded by water, no fire rangers have been employed to protect it. On account of the increased activity in prospecting for minerals in that vicinity, however, it is likely that it will need to be protected in the near future.

The immediate care of the reserve has been entrusted to Mr. Hugh Munro, Crown Timber Agent at Port Arthur. There is a considerable quantity of pine and other timber growing on the reserve and since the Order-in-Council was passed, applications to cut pine from it have been received and refused by the Commissioner of Crown Lands. The creation of this reserve with the additions likely to be made in the vicinity will form no inconsiderable factor in the timber supplies of that district.

THE TEMAGAMI RESERVE.

This is the most important Forest Reserve so far created on account of its extent and because it contains a very large quantity of timber that has not yet been lumbered over.

On November 27th, 1900, the following memorandum was prepared for the Assistant Commissioner:

"The object aimed at in the 'Act to Establish Forest Reserves' was the permanent withdrawal from agricultural settlement of extensive areas of non-tillable land for the double purpose of securing future supplies of timber and protecting the sources of some of our principal streams.

"Fortunately for the Province the areas best suited for one purpose are equally adapted for the other. Most of the broken and non-tillable areas of forest land are at the head waters of the rivers.

"So far two Forest Reserves have been created under the Act, one in the rear of Frontenac and Addington, comprising an area of about 80,000 acres, and one on the north shore of Lake Superior, taking in the promontory of Thunder Cape, including about 45,000 acres.

"Both these reserves have been cut over and are now growing a new crop of trees of different varieties, including white pine.

"While there is considerable untillable land in similar condition, that has been cut over and in many cases burned over, on which there is a new crop of young timber, and that could properly be placed in reserves, it is for the most part under license to lumbermen who realize the value of the growing timber and prefer to pay the small ground rent until such time as the new crop is ready for harvest. So long as so-called settlement is kept out of these areas and they are kept immune from fire, some of the purposes of the Forest Reserves Act will be served, though the Province will not receive the full value of the growing timber under the existing licenses. Owing to the difficulty of extending the forest reserve system upon licensed territory, it is very desirable that the reserves should be added to by taking in territory for which no license has been given, on which the timber has not yet been sold or cut, and where the soil is not suitable for general farming.

"Lying north of Lake Nipissing is a large area that would seem to be very suitable for such a reserve and that for various reasons should be withdrawn from settlement in the near future. I refer to the territory surrounding Temagami, Lady Evelyn, Rabbit and other lakes—a territory of virgin timber, including among other valuable trees many million feet of white and red pine, among which the axe of the lumberman has not yet been heard.

"As you are aware, the wonderful beauty of this region has during the past two years attracted a growing tourist travel through it, necessitating the employment of a considerable staff of fire rangers to protect the forest along the canoe routes.

"The Canadian Pacific Railway Company is advertising Lake Temagami extensively as a tourist resort and naturally there will be a demand for land for truck farming, for summer residences and for speculation. As the granting of the land for these purposes would greatly increase the danger from fire there would arise the necessity of disposing of the standing timber sooner than would perhaps be otherwise desirable. While it may be inadvisable to exclude tourists or even summer residents from the district, the provisions of the Forest Reserves Act, while preventing the sale of the land for agricultural purposes, enables the Government to better regulate such occupations as may be allowed and would permit more perfect control by the Commissioner of Crown Lands of the tourist travel as well as of the exploitation of the immense timber wealth of the district.

"Important mineral discoveries have been made in the district, and this industry also may be easily regulated under the provisions of the Act. I would therefore recommend that the territory around Lake Temagami, Lady Evelyn Lake and Rabbit Lake, as laid down on the accompanying map may be created a reserve under the Forest Reserves Act of 1898, amending act of 1900.

"There is a block of surveyed and unsettled townships lying south of Lake Temagami and, while much of the land contained in them is unsuited for agriculture, I do not think it advisable to include them in the reserve, the boundaries of which I would suggest as follows :

"Commencing at the southeast angle of the township of McCarthy; thence northerly along the east limit thereof six miles more or less to the northeast angle thereof; thence due west along the north limit of said township and the Township of MacKelcan to the northwest angle of the latter township; thence due north, astronomically forty-two miles more or less to a point due west astronomically from the southwest angle of the township of Hudson; thence due east astronomically twenty-nine miles more or less to the Montreal River; thence southeasterly along the west bank of the said river to the north boundary of the Gillies & Bros. timber limit, as laid out on the west side of Lake Temiskaming; thence westerly along the north limit of said timber berth to the northwest angle thereof; thence southeasterly, westerly and southerly along the west or rear boundaries of the timber berths laid out and under license on the west shore of Lake Temiskaming and the Montreal River to a point due east as-tronomically from the northeast angle of the Township of McCallum; thence due west astronomically to the place of beginning, following along the north boundaries of the townships of McCallum, Hobbs, Pardo and McNish, containing about 2,200 square miles or 1,408,000 acres.

"This, of course, is exclusive of such patented land, if any, that there may be with the said boundaries, and of the property rights of the Hudson's Bay Company, who have a trading post on Bear Island in Lake Temagami. There is also a small band of Indians residing within the proposed reserve, but I am not aware that they have proprietary rights over any particular territory, no reservation so far as I know having been set aside for them. As some of them are already employed as guides by tourists and more will be, they would be at no disadvantage from the creation of the Forest Reserve.

"In framing regulations under which the reserve should be placed due care would need to be observed not to conflict with the right given to the Sturgeon Falls Pulp Company over 75 square miles within the territory or partly within it on which to cut spruce, balsam, pine and hardwoods six inches and upwards in diameter for the purpose of manufacture into paper pulp. The conditions contained in the agreement with the pulp company are such as not to seriously interfere with proper forestry regulations in the reserve. Yours respectfully,

"THOS. SOUTHWORTH, Director of Forestry."

"Toronto, November 27, 1900.

On January 7th, 1901, the Assistant Commissioner of Crown Lands in a further memorandum to the Commissioner endorsed the recommendation of the Director of Forestry, in which he remarked:

"Having regard to the objects to be served and the circumstances of the locality the undersigned submits with deference his opinion that there are many advantages to be derived by the creation of a forest reserve in the Temagami region, and, further, he is of the opinion that the boundaries proposed by Mr. Southworth will well answer the initial establishment of the reserve. While there are many great advantages to be derived from the establishment of the reserve, the undersigned is unable to see any danger or disadvantage that would accrue by the creation of such a reserve. He therefore respectfully recommends that an order in council be obtained setting apart the territory included in the boundaries proposed by Mr. Southworth as a forest reserve.

"In conclusion the undersigned takes the liberty of emphasizing the opinion that something more than the mere setting apart of the reserve will be necessary if good results are to follow. The authority of the Government will have to be fully and freely exercised and care taken to see that all the regulations for the preservation of the timber, etc., are observed. It will be, in the opinion of the undersigned, necessary to appoint a ranger in charge of the reserve, clothed with magisterial and other powers, and aided by a staff of assistants, to act as fire and forest rangers, game wardens, tourist guides, etc., and it will be necessary to provide that no person shall enter for exploring, clearing, hunting, fishing, etc., without a permit or authority from the officer in charge. There are other details which can be worked out when the system of management is being finally dealt with.

"Annexed hereto is a map on which the boundaries of the proposed reserve are delimited according to the description in the memorandum of the Director of Forestry.

"AUBREY WHITE, Assistant Commissioner."

January 7th, 1901.

The following Order-in-Council was approved by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor on the 11th day of January, A.D. 1901:

"Upon the recommendation of the Honorable the Commissioner of Crown Lands the Committee of Council advise that the territory hereinafter described be created a Forest Reserve under the authority of the Forest Reserves Act, 61 Vic., chap. 10.

"Commencing at the southeast angle of the Township of McCarthy, thence northerly along the east limit thereof six miles more or less to the northeast angle thereof, thence due west along the north limit of the said township and the Township of MacKelcan to the northwest angle of the latter township, thence due north astronomically from the southwest angle of the Township of Hudson, thence due east astronomically to the Montreal River, thence southeasterly along the west bank of the Montreal River to the north boundary of Gillies & Bros. timber limit laid out on the west side of Lake Temiskaming, thence westerly along the north limit of said timber berth to the northwest angle thereof, thence southeasterly along the west boundary of the timber berths laid out on the west shore of Lake Temiskaming and along the Montreal River to a point due east of the northeast angle of the Township of McCallum, thence due west astronomically to the place of beginning, following along the north boundaries of the Townships of McCallum, Hobbs, Pardo and McNish, containing about 2,200 square miles or 1,408,000 acres.

"The said reservation to be exclusive of such patented land, if any, as there may be within the said boundaries, and of the property rights of the Hudson's Bay Company, who have a trading post on Bear Island in Lake Temagami.

"Certified.

"J. LONSDALE CAPREOL, Asst. Clerk Executive Council."

TEMAGAMI RESERVE.

There are two settlements in the Reserve on or near Bear Island in Lake Temagami and on White Bear Lake comprised, aside from the Hudson Bay agent and his family, of Indians and halfbreeds.

The White Bear Lake colony is comprised of Chief Francois White Bear, his relatives and a few other families. On Bear Island there are five families in permanent houses, besides the agent of the Hudson Bay Company. Besides the houses on Bear Island there are two substantial log houses belonging to Charlie Moore and James Friday on the peninsula between the northeast arm of Lake Temagami and Kokoko Bay. Neither of these houses were occupied during the past summer, though Friday has a small plot of land cultivated at his place.

Malcolm McLean, an old servant of the Hudson Bay Company, who lives on Bear Island, and has an Indian wife, has a log house on Anima Nipissing Lake, where he hunts in the winter, and some of the others have shelters more or less substantial in other parts of the Reserve used for the same purpose in winter.

Nowhere in the Reserve has there been any cultivation of the soil to any extent. Chief White Bear has probably made the best attempt at farming, almost his sole crop being potatoes, though he has some hay and pasture and keeps a cow. In fact, it is very difficult, so far as I could see, to find even an acre of land fit for cultivation in one place, so broken is the country, though it is likely as further search is made more cultivable land may be found in small patches.

The Sturgeon Falls Pulp Company, previous to the setting aside of the Reserve, built small log houses at Sharp Rock Portage, between Lady Evelyn and Temagami Lakes, at Obabika Lake, at the northeast arm, and at the southern outlet of Temagami. Two of these are in good condition, two others are not completed. They were erected where the Pulp Company proposed to erect dams to raise the level of Temagami, and have not since been used, and cost about $40 or $50 each in labor.

The only other improvements made by white people so far as I know are at Sandy Inlet on the north arm of Lake Temagami and on the shore of the northeast arm. At the former place extensive buildings were erected some years ago by Rev. Mr. Paradis where he proposed to form an orphan institution. The place was abandoned this year, and the buildings are falling down. At the other point there is a ruined shack and a small clearing, on which there is a growth of young trees some feet high. I was informed the improvements were made seven or eight years ago. Although the place is very remote, I presume the location was selected on the general understanding that the proposed Nipissing and James Bay Railway would pass through it as it is on the narrow strip of land separating the Temagami waters from those flowing east via the Metabetchouan River to Lake Temiskaming. No one has resided on the property and there are no improvements that would in any way constitute a claim.

As to the Sandy Inlet place there has been some one in residence for some years till this year, but as Father Paradis holds other unpatented property in the district and has not himself resided for any length of time on this place, I do not see that he could in any way establish a claim to the property, though if the Department could utilize the property in any way it would be proper and advisable to make him a fair allowance for it. I understand there is considerable window glass and other hardware there that could be utilized.

INDIANS.

The Indians living in the territory are aware of the fact that they are not on an Indian Reserve, and consequently have no legal rights in the territory. This band of Indians, as pointed out in a previous memorandum by the Assistant Commissioner, have no Reserve. They were not represented at the convention at which reserves were allotted the various bands, but have for many years inhabited this territory as a hunting ground, and it is never trespassed upon by other Indians. Their residence in the Reserve is an advantage to the Government as the work of caring for and operating the territory will be profitable for them. At no point in the Reserve except on Bear Island has any quantity of pine or other timber been cut.

THE HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY.

For many years the Hudsons Bay Company have maintained a trading post in the territory. Originally the post was established on what is now called Old Temagami Island, traces of which in the form of a burial ground and the stones of an old chimney may still be seen. There is a tradition among the Indians that there is somewhere on this Island a large quantity of rum in barrels, buried. When the order came to the Hudson Bay agents to destroy the rum that had previously been dealt out to the Indians the agent at this post buried it. If he did it is probably there, or at least the barrels are, as no one has succeeded in locating it.

Many years ago this post was abandoned and a new one established on Bear Island. Considerable land was cleared by the Hudson Bay Company on the island and four buildings, a warehouse, a store, agent's house and a smaller storehouse erected. Around the post the Indians settled, and there are now half a dozen houses occupied besides the Company's.

Just what claim their long occupation may give the Hudson's Bay Company to the land I am not competent to state, but they cannot lay claim to the southern point of the island, which has been occupied by the natives or at least cleared by them.

STURGEON FALLS PULP COMPANY.

The right to cut the spruce and some other trees in that part of the Reserve lying south of an east and west line running past the southern part of Bear Island was leased to the Sturgeon Falls Pulp Company previous to the creation of the Reserve. The agreement with the Pulp Company stipulates that they may not proceed to cut the spruce if in the opinion of the Government forest officials it will endanger the pine timber. This if enforced would practically prohibit them from operating in the Reserve till after the pine is cut, for there is much less spruce than pine. This provision is not very definite and might lead to misunderstanding and I would suggest that if possible a new agreement be made with the Pulp Company to the effect that in so far as that part of their concession lying within the Reserve was concerned they be allowed to cut subject to such regulations as might be adopted from time to time for cutting operations in the Reserve.

THE PAST YEAR'S WORK.

In accordance with your instructions no attempt was made this year to arrange for taking out any timber or to do other than protect the Reserve from fire and to do such other work as might be done by the fire rangers, without lessening their vigilance in watching for and suppressing fires. In May last there were employed six fire rangers and three assistant rangers, under the direction of a Chief Fire Ranger, making ten men in all. The three assistant rangers and one ranger were selected from the residents of the Reserve, the rest were sent in from the outside. Mr. Lawrence Loughrin of Pembroke was appointed Chief Fire Ranger. Early in June I visited the Reserve, and hearing that some of the Indians were somewhat disturbed at the arrival of the rangers and in doubt as to the intention of the Government regarding them I met the band at Chief Bear's house and fully explained, through an interpreter, what was proposed to be done by the Government. Afterwards Chief White Bear expressed his approval of our plans and the natives have so far acted in hearty co-operation with the rangers.

During most of the season the rangers occupied a vacant house owned by Mr. John Turner, formerly Hudson Bay agent, paying therefor a monthly rental of $4.00. The house was small and quite unsuitable and it was decided to erect a new building for the purpose.

A hill on the southern point of Bear Island was selected as a site and during the summer a storey and a half log house was erected 32 x 20 feet in size.

The lumber for the house as well as the shingles had to be manufactured on the spot, and it therefore required much more labor and time than would be required elsewhere. In addition to the house there was erected a shed to serve as a boat house.

FIRES.

Part of the season was unusually dry and the danger from fire was very great. Extensive forest fires to the east and in Quebec and to the north beyond the Height of Land caused a good deal of alarm to the rangers from the dense clouds of smoke, the origin of which was for some time hard to ascertain causing a constant patrol of the Reserve.

During the season there were eight fires within the boundaries of the Reserve, none of which did any serious damage owing to the prompt action of the rangers. Four of these fires resulted from lightning and two of these four would have spread had they not been suppressed by the rangers. The other two fires from lightning were extinguished by the rain that accompanied the lightning.

A fire near Tetapaga Lake, evidently caused by lightning, was discovered by Ranger Peter McGregor, who was stationed on White Bear Lake, and he was obliged to call on Chief Ranger Loughrin and a large staff of assistants to get it under control. This fire occurred in the midst of very big pine timber, and had it not been discovered in time would have caused great loss.

Another fire, originating in the same way, occurred on Old Temagami Island, but it was promptly extinguished.

A fire occurred on the Rabbit Chute Portage, that while it was got under control before doing any damage, was interesting as showing how easy it is to start a fire in this northern forest. Two of the natives of the Reserve, who, by the way, are generally very careful with fire, were on their way to Montreal River, and stopped at this Portage to cook their dinner. After carefully drenching the fire with water they went on, and one of the rangers, passing over the same route a couple of hours later, found that a fire had started in the dry pine needles about four feet away from the place where the Indians had cooked their meal. The cooking fire had been built on a rock, and when pouring water on the embers a spark had been thrown by the steam to a distance of some feet and been fanned into flame by the wind after they had gone.

Two fires in the northern part of the Reserve were caused by tourists with guides from outside.

The Indians resident in the Reserve are excellent guides and very careful. In order to have some sort of control of the guides conducting tourists through the Reserve, it will probably be found necessary to require them to obtain a license for the purpose, such license to be renewed only on proof of the applicant's fitness.

It was the intention that Mr. Loughrin and Mr. McGregor would have inspected the southeast part of the Reserve with the object of estimating the timber on the territory covered, but as the small staff of rangers was kept busy owing to the dryness of the season, this was not done except in a very general way. This work should be undertaken at an early date with a view to the disposal of the pine timber, much of which in that portion of the Reserve referred to is mature and in some cases is deteriorating.

THE PRODUCTION OF TANNIN IN ONTARIO.

By J. A. De Cew, School of Practical Science.

One of Ontario's important industries is that of tanning, and for this purpose hemlock bark is the commonest and cheapest material used. The bark is taken from the common hemlock (Tsuga Canadensis) by felling and peeling it in the spring of the year, when the bark has been loosened by the growth of the cambium layer. The bark is cut into four-foot lengths and carefully piled in order that it may become properly seasoned, for if a fermentation occurs in it the tanning properties will be greatly reduced. During the winter following the bark is drawn on sleighs to the nearest siding and shipped by rail to the tannery where it is ground to a powder and leached with hot water or exhaust steam, the liquors coming off from these leaches being used in the tanning.

As the consumption of bark goes on, all that country contiguous to the railways becomes denuded of hemlock trees, thus each year the haul to the railways becomes greater and is an ever increasing factor in the price of the bark. The stumpage value of the bark need hardly be considered, for the average settler will sell his bark for a price barely sufficient to pay him for his labor expended since he gains thereby a market for the peeled timber and a winter's work near home. But with the recent increased demand for labor and the rapid rise in wages the settler can now find much more lucrative employment elsewhere and this has forced the tanners to put in camps themselves in order to procure a sufficient quantity of bark. This places the price of tan bark at last absolutely upon a labor basis, with its value varying directly with the price of labor and the amount of work done upon it. And this being the case the time must surely come when we shall be forced by economy to separate the tanning ingredients from the bark at the source of supply, and thereby save the unnecessary expense of freighting a very large amount of non-essential materials. That the time has already arrived the following discussion will attempt to demonstrate, but let us first investigate some of the properties and sources of the materials that are generally used in tanning.

There are a number of substances found in certain woods, barks and leaves which have an astringent taste and acid reaction, and are known under the general term, "Tannin" on account of their resemblance or relationship to tannic acid. They are formed in the leaves of the plant under the conditions necessary for general assimilation, transmitted through the leaf stock and distributed through the permanent structure. The tannins formed in the various plants differ somewhat in properties and composition, but they all possess in common the property of combining with hides to form leather, penetrating and reacting with the animal fibres in such a manner that the hides thus treated will not be decomposed and are insoluble.

The tannins are subcrystalline solids, neither fusible nor volatile, and although fairly soluble in cold water, they are quite soluble in hot water and such solvents as alcohol, acetic ether and acetone.

They may be identified by two typical reactions:

1. With salts of iron they give a blue black or green color and this reaction is the basis of most of our writing inks.
2. With a solution of gelatine they form artificial leather, the reaction being quite similar to that taking place with hides.

All of the natural tannins are strong reducing agents, absorbing oxygen readily, especially in alkaline solutions.

The tannins have quite an extensive application as mordants in the dyeing industry, for they have the property of combining with the textile fabric and giving to it an increased affinity for coloring matters.

It is quite apparent that these valuable properties will give to the tannins an extensive industrial application, and as their synthetic preparation on a commercial scale is as yet merely speculative, the vegetable kingdom remains the only source of supply and an exceedingly varied one it is. We find the tanning principles in the fruit, wood, bark and leaves of a great number of plants and future investigation will doubtless reveal them in many more at present unknown. The following incomplete list will indicate somewhat the wide diffusion of these principles:

Northern trees—Oak, chestnut, willow, sumach, elm, ash, elder, birch, cherry, poplar, hazel, pine, fir, hemlock, etc.

Other sources and products—Tea, gall nuts, gambier, divi divi, catechu, valonia, quebracho, etc.

The most important of the tropical tannin producing plants are exported to England, United States and other countries and there made into extracts which are used for tanning and other purposes.

Galls or gall nuts are excrescences formed upon the leaves and leaf stocks of a species of oak (the Quercus Infectoria) which grows in the Levant. They are produced from the puncture made by the female gallwasp in depositing her eggs, around which the juice of the tree exudes and dries in concentric portions. The galls are gathered before the insect has escaped from its shell when they contain a large percentage of gallotannic acid.

Gambier is an extract prepared from the leaves of the "Uncaria Gambier," and is principally imported from Singapore.

Divi-divi is the pod of a leguminous shrub, the "Caesalpinia Coriaria," which is indigenous in South America, and from it a tannin extract is made.

Catechu or "Terra Japonica," is an extract prepared from the heart wood of the Acacia Catechu, which is generally imported from India.

Valonia is an extract made from the acorn cups of the Quercus Aegilops, which grows in Morea in China.

Quebracho is an extract from the wood of the Aspidosperma, many species of which are found in tropical America.

Sumach is the name applied to a number of plants of the genus Rhus, which, although natives of Asia, are cultivated in Sicily and other parts of Europe for the tannin which they contain. The leaves are cut from the tree just before it blooms, and after being dried are ground to a fine powder. Nearly all the Sumach we use is imported from Sicily either as powder or extract.

The willow bark is used extensively for tanning in Russia and the oak was the native tan bark of England, but in North America the hemlock, chestnut and oak have the commercial importance, both as a local and foreign supply.

The chestnut extract is prepared from both wood and bark, and is greatly valued on account of its freedom from the coloring matters common to other extracts, with which it is often used in admixture as a modifying agent.

The oak derives its tanning properties from the Quercitannic acid contained in both wood and bark, and although the bark is the prevailing source, an extract is also made from the sawdust. This tannin also occurs in the elm and produces a leather that is highly esteemed. It belongs to that class of tannins which produce a bloom upon the leather during tanning.

Many other barks are rich in tannin, but are very little used, either from lack of knowledge concerning them, or that they are not found in sufficient quantity to become a marketable commodity.

As the oak and chestnut are fast becoming rare and valuable, they are scarcely to be counted on as the source of any considerable quantity of tannin in the future, and in order to maintain or increase the supply we are forced to look to other sources.

Now we have in our own Province the hemlock tree, which occurs in such enormous quantities that with proper treatment it might be and forever remain an extensive source of tannin. At present, however, the cost of hemlock tannin in Ontario is more than it should be on account of the expensive methods employed, and in consequence its consumption is limited to the local tannery and barely keeps pace with the demand for the timber, in spite of the cheap grade of lumber that the tree produces.

In the United States the annual production of solid hemlock extract is said to be considerably over ten thousand tons, but none is produced in our Province notwithstanding the enormous hemlock limits it contains and the small value of the timber, the hemlock extract we actually consume being shipped to us from Nova Scotia. Our Government has apparently endeavored to encourage its local manufacture, for hemlock is the only extract on the market upon which there is an import duty, and the export of the bark is prohibited. What more favorable conditions could be required for its manufacture, and yet the tanners say that the making of extract is unprofitable. They shudder at the enormous and expensive plant that would be required, and as they should be more familiar with the subject than any one else their decision is final. They have in mind, however, the large permanent extractive plants of the United States, which make tannin and dye wood extracts from materials gathered from all parts of the world. These plants contain huge and expensive extractors and vacuum pans, resembling those employed in sugar refining, and are of course too costly to establish in the forest.

But if we are to experience the industrial evolution of other nations we must change our methods and in this instance adopt those that were employed by the Germans under similar conditions. When they were confronted by an expensive tan bark, which was made so, solely by the excessive cost of transportation, they solved the question in the following manner: Small plants, consisting of a cheap portable power, a bark cutter or grinder and wooden extraction vats were set up in or near the source of supply, and with these they made a fairly concentrated extract. The cost of shipping this extract to the tannery was but a fraction of the transportation cost of the bark, and the cost of extraction in the forest but slightly in excess of the grinding and leaching process that would have been eventually employed by the tanner.

The plant may be stationed for a season's run in any locality where there is a sufficient block of timber and this is not hard to find in Ontario. After the bark is peeled it should be treated as soon as possible and consumed the same year. It may be cut into fine shavings by being fed from the end against a series of revolving knives and as each shaving is a thin transverse section of the bark cells the tannin is extracted without difficulty. The bark may, however, be ground to a fine powder by the usual form of grinder. It is now placed in a series of ten wooden tanks, which are arranged in a circle, the bottom of each being connected by a pipe to the top of the other. Steam from the boiler is now turned into number one, and passes through each in turn, until it is drawn off from number ten as a quite concentrated extract. A number of these vats are employed because the extraction of the tannin depends upon the laws of diffusion. Thus, in boiling water, the tannin will leave the bark and become diffused throughout the solvent until equilibrium is established. If the solution is now removed and more solvent added the tannin remaining in the bark will now become diffused, forming a weaker solution, and if this process is continued all of the tannin will be finally extracted. Therefore if hot water is passed successively through ten vats, in which the bark of number two is richer than number one and number three richer than number two, etc., it is evident that the solution must become continually stronger as it passes through each in turn, and when discharged from number ten is a quite concentrated extract. When the tannin in tank number one is exhausted it is refilled and then becomes number ten.

By this process we eliminate the harmful effects of the open evaporating pan, in which the tan leach is concentrated in the open air, and a large part of the tannic acid thus destroyed by oxidation. Tan liquors or extracts should never come in contact with iron pipes or tanks, for the tannic acid will corrode the iron, combining with its salts with the formation of ink, and correspondingly neutralizing its tanning properties. Carboic acid or corrosive sublimate added in minute quantities to an extract will prevent the growth of fungi and in addition of one-half cubic centimeter of glacial acetic acid to one litre of extract, is valuable as a preventative of oxidation.

If several of these portable plants are in operation in the same locality and an extract for export is desired, a solid extract may be prepared by further concentration in a vacuum pan. This apparatus will evaporate all of the moisture in the extract at a temperature below 100 degrees centigrade on account of the partial vacuum at which it is kept, and as there is no access of air, the tannin can not be decomposed either by hydrolysis or oxidation. A solid extract may be composed of various quantities of tannic, gallic and other organic acids, coloring matters, starch, gums and any other extractive ingredients soluble in hot water. Therefore the percentage by weight of tannic acid is an exceedingly variable factor, depending upon the method of extraction and the relative amount of extractive materials contained in the original substance. In the liquid extract all of these inert ingredients affect the specific gravity of the solution and the customary habit of expressing the strength of the extract in terms of degrees Baume is very unreliable, and often gives a fictitious value to a worthless extract because all of the tannin might have been decomposed during extraction and yet the density remain the same.

The extraction of tanning materials is not an elaborate process, but proper methods are necessary to obtain good results, and it is more than probable that any failures in the past in the preparation of tan extracts are traceable to mistakes in this respect rather than that the business is in itself unprofitable.

The possibilities in the development of this industry appeal more to the lumbermen who own the limits than even the tanners, for it could be carried on in harmony with other lumbering operations, and other tannins beside the hemlock, such as ash, birch, etc., might also be profitably introduced. There is no reason why our lumbermen should not supply all of the local tanners with an extract at a price less for equal tanning power than that now paid for bark, and still have a considerable amount for export. Under these conditions a large quantity of hemlock timber now inaccessible could be lumbered with a profit, as the bark would have a stumpage value and would pay the cost of seasoning the timber. Hemlock is now taken out in localities where the bark has no value, and in endeavoring to float it in the green state large quantities are lost. As hemlock has also a value for sulphite pulp making there will soon be an urgent need for some method of consuming the bark in the distant forest, and if one such as has been suggested be employed it will pave the way to the more scientific development that accompanies the application of the principles of forestry and economy.

FARM FORESTRY.

The proportion of the total area of a district, which should be perpetually covered with timber in order to secure favorable climatic conditions and regulate the water supply is usually fixed by authorities on forestry at about 25 per cent. Twenty per cent may be regarded as the lowest percentage to which the woodland acreage can be reduced without seriously endangering agricultural interests. In many cases in this Province the danger line has been passed and the proportion of timbered land to total area reduced much below twenty per cent. There is a great deal of misconception as to the extent to which deforestation has been carried, not merely owing to the survival of the inherited tradition that Ontario is a heavily timbered country, but because of the extended area of the Province and the widely different characteristics of its two great natural divisions.

Considering the Province as a whole, there is a far greater area of timbered than of cleared or treeless land. But a fact that cannot be too frequently repeated in order that it may be thoroughly grasped and assimilated, as a preliminary to any intelligent appreciation of the forestry situation, is that the boundary lines of Ontario include two areas greatly differing in many important respects as to soil, climate, natural or possible products and capabilities, which must for forestry purposes be regarded as two distinct communities. The settled and cultivated portion lying north of the St. Lawrence and Lakes Ontario and Erie and south of Lake Nipissing and the French River being nearly all adapted for cultivation, has been largely deforested. The title to the lands has, for the most part, passed from the Crown to private owners and excepting in a few localities it is impossible to introduce broad general measures for reforestation without infringing upon vested interests.

As regards the much larger region lying north and west of Lake Nipissing, popularly known as New Ontario, entirely different conditions, both natural and artificial, prevail, which necessitate the adoption of an altogether different policy as detailed in the first portion of this report.

While this system of forest reserves has been applied to some portions of old Ontario it is obviously only capable of being followed there to a very limited extent, for the reason above stated. By far the greater portion of the country being cultivable and under patent, the areas to which the forest reserve system could be profitably applied, though by no means small in the aggregate, are to a large extent either beyond the control of the Government or so scattered and interspersed with farming land as to render any considerable extension of the system impracticable. Even were it possible to put all the remaining portions of the Crown domain of a non-cultivable character in old Ontario under strict forestry management such a course would not to any considerable degree remedy the evils of deforestation in the more thickly settled and fertile portions of the country. It is precisely in the most productive and richest agricultural districts, those bordering the lakes and extending through the western and midland districts of this division of the Province that the unfavorable consequences of over-clearance have made themselves most severely felt, and are likely as the process continues to be still more keenly experienced in the future.

Both the general excellence of the soil for farming purposes and the steady and increasing demand of local as well as distant markets for timber and wood products of all kinds afford to the individual owner of woodland a direct, pecuniary incentive to strip his land of its forest growth. Consideration for the public interest in a matter which can only be affected in a remote and infinitesimal degree by the acts of any one individual, has little influence as a restraining motive, as compared with the immediate opportunities for profit which have stimulated the process of over-clearance in the best agricultural districts, until the proportion of timbered to cleared land is in many localities very far below the minimum required by the principles of scientific forestry. The evil is somewhat minimized in its effects upon climate by the existence of large timbered areas in northern Ontario, but for which the injurious effects of the injudicious and indiscriminate clearance in other parts might perhaps have been somewhat more severe. But the more obvious results of local denudation are not appreciably counteracted by the presence of a large timbered area at the distance of one or two hundred miles which cannot affect the natural storage and distribution of the local rainfall, or afford protection from the sweep of windstorms.

Physical science knows nothing of political boundary lines, but even intelligent people are apt to be misled by attaching undue importance to purely arbitrary and artificial divisions. Supposing that Ontario comprised merely the 49,000 square miles embraced in its southern division, and that New Ontario were a separate Province, painted a different color on the map, it would probably not occur to anyone to regard the thickly timbered character of the latter as an offset to the undue deforestation of our southern counties or to strike a general average, including both sections, to show that a due percentage still remained in forest. Everyone could in such a case realize that the settled area had considerably less than the requisite proportion of timber conducive to the best conditions for farming industry. Yet the situation is nowise different because well timbered New Ontario, instead of being set apart as a distinct Province, is politically an integral portion of Ontario, and its wooded regions, lumped together with our tree-denuded frontier counties, keep up a high general average of the proportion of woodland to cleared area. In dealing with the forestry problem as affecting Southern Ontario, it must be treated as an outside community.

WOODLAND AND CLEARED AREA.

A portion of the Forestry Report for the year 1897 was devoted to an inquiry as to the extent of the areas of woodland in the settled portion of the Province, excluding the newer districts. The investigation was based on statistics furnished by the township municipalities to the Bureau of Industries, taken from the returns of township assessors for the year 1896. The following was the result arrived at by comparing the figures showing the woodland with the total area of each county.

"Taking the latest returns as they stand we find that thirty of the counties of Ontario have less than 25 per cent. of their total area under timber. The proportion of woodland in sixteen of these counties is less than twenty and over ten per cent., while still more conspicuous examples of the extent to which over-clearance has been carried are afforded by the following: In Dufferin, Wentworth and Huron counties the proportion of woodland to total area is ten per cent.; Prince Edward and Lambton, nine per cent.; Wellington and Brant, eight per cent.; Peel and York, seven per cent., and Victoria only five per cent. In several other counties which extend from the front some distance back into the unsettled district, the front groups of townships show a considerably less proportion than 25 per cent., the average only being brought above that figure by the inclusion within their boundaries of large, sparsely-settled areas. The conclusion is which these figures, when analyzed, point is that throughout the greater extent of the really good and fertile agricultural region of Southern Ontario, where the land has been longest settled and the greatest inducements offered by natural advantages to its permanent occupation, the percentage of forest has been reduced far below that which should have been retained to insure the perpetuation of these favorable conditions."

During the interval of five years which has elapsed since these data were given there is every reason to believe, apart altogether from statistics, that in very many of the counties containing the best agricultural land, the work of deforestation has gone on with increased rapidity. The period of industrial prosperity and expansion under which our manufacturing interests have so greatly thriven, has been attended by a largely increased demand for hardwood timber, some kinds which were formerly but little in requisition being now extensively called for in connection with particular lines of manufacture. There are in the Province some 1,500 sawmills, a large proportion of which are located in neighborhoods more or less remote from the lands under timber license, and which draw their supplies from lands belonging to private owners and are principally devoted to the manufacture of hardwood timber. If the land from which these supplies are drawn were operated in accordance with forestry principles, taking only well-matured trees, and allowing others to grow up and take their places, this demand could be filled without endangering the sources of agricultural prosperity. But unfortunately there is no reason to suppose that any appreciable number of farmers or land owners are exercising due care in this respect, especially in localities where the soil is of such a quality as to repay the labor of clearance by an addition to the acreage devoted to tillage.

In order to learn the extent to which the clearing of timbered lands has been pursued since the previous investigation, based upon the municipal statistics of 1896, a comparison has been undertaken between those figures and similar returns made by the township clerks for the year 1901, by which it will be seen that the situation in most localities is steadily becoming worse. Before presenting the figures there are a few considerations in connection with this source of information which may be submitted in order to avoid misleading conclusions.

ASSESSMENT RETURNS.

The township assessment rolls, from which the returns to the Bureau of Industries are compiled by the township clerks, give the total area of the land assessed, classified under the respective headings of "cleared lands," "woodland" and "swamp, marsh or waste." In the past the distinction between "woodland" and "waste" has not been very closely observed, and it was found that a good deal of land, from which most of the timber had been cut, but upon which a few scattered trees remained, was improperly classed as woodland. Attention was drawn to this matter by the Bureau of Forestry, and of late years care has been taken to secure greater accuracy in this respect. A difficulty in the way of securing correct returns noted by some correspondents is the tendency on the part of taxpayers to understate the area of cleared land, and consequently to exaggerate that of either woodland or waste in order to secure a low assessment. Another feature which renders it not always advisable to accept municipal statistics at their face value, without carefully analyzing them, is the great discrepancies observable in some instances between the figures giving the total acreage and the aggregate area under the different classifications. This is, no doubt, due in some cases to the presence of lakes or large bodies of water, but in other instances, where the area thus unaccounted for amounts to many thousands of acres, the only explanation is that the assessor has failed to classify a large proportion of the land. A subsequent and more correct return may show a very marked apparent increase in the item of cleared land, woodland or waste, as the case may be, where there has been little or no change. Glaring inaccuracies of this kind are, however, mainly confined to the newer or more sparsely settled townships, where there are, no doubt, considerable difficulties in the way of getting even approximately correct returns. The present inquiry is mainly concerned with the older portion of the Province, and while making due allowances for obvious defects, such as have been indicated in isolated cases, the value of the broad general conclusions drawn from the comparison of one year's returns with those of another is in no way impaired by them.

The following tables show the total acreage of each county in Southern Ontario, by townships and the areas of cleared land, woodland and waste, respectively, according to the returns furnished by the township clerks to the Bureau of Industries for 1901.

The woodland area of this county, which was 159,104 acres in 1896, has decreased by over one-third. Of the fifteen townships twelve show decreases, the most notable of which are Gosfield South from 10,197 acres to 2,585; Rochester, from 14,764 to 8,129; and Mersea, from 20,101 to 17,300. The woodland area of three townships has slightly increased.

Kent had 173,213 acres of woodland in 1896. Of the ten townships two are credited with increases in the woodland area which are evidently due to more correct classification. Most of the remaining municipalities show very considerable decreases, as follows: Chatham, from 10,593 acres to 6,339; Dover, from 10,763 to 7,369; Harwich, from 19,519 to 14,049; Tilbury East, from 6,217 to 365; Zone, from 9,870 to 5,549.

The woodland area in 1896 covered 119,323 acres. The principal decreases are in the townships of Aldborough, from 20,370 to 18,030; Southwold, from 21,726 to 16,279, and Yarmouth, from 13,193 to 11,023. Seven townships in all show a falling off, and two an increase, the woodland area of Dunwich being returned as 15,063 acres, as against the former figure of 12,530.

*Returns for 1900.

The figures for 1896 give the woodland area of this county at 105,018 acres. There are eight townships, four of which show decreases, which are partly offset by increases in the others, the two most noteworthy augmentations being in Walsingham North, from 6,206 to 14,607, where the figures formerly representing waste land have been transferred to the woodland column, and in Windham, where a large area of land before unclassified is now entered as woodland. This latter, of course, is only an apparent change. As to the changes in classification they may perhaps indicate that land formerly waste is being covered with second growth to such an extent as to justify its being considered woodland or they may merely reflect the differing ideas of assessors. It is altogether likely that the decrease in Norfolk county is a good deal larger than it appears to be.

The woodland area of Welland County has decreased by over one-half, the acreage in 1896 being 50,952. Two townships show slight increases, the more considerable diminutions which have taken place in other townships being: Crowland, from 3,880 to 2,610; Pelham, from 5,286 to 2,810, and Wainfleet, from 3,052 to 1,927.

The woodland area of Lambton in 1896 was given as 246,024, which indicates a falling off of one-third. The principal decreases are: Brooke, from 25,767 to 16,811; Enniskillen, from 21,010 to 12,692; Moore, from 35,000 to 29,000; Sombra, from 38,930 to 31,946; and Warwick, 13,423 to 9,473. Apparent large increases in the timbered area of Dawn and Plympton Townships are largely due to the classification of land, the character of which was not specified in the earlier returns.

In 1896 the wooded area of this county was 89,248 acres. Four townships show increases, the principal being Howick, from 9,683 to 11,099 acres, and Stephen, from 7,225 to 10,255. The woodland in the other twelve townships has considerably diminished. In Colborne it has shrunk from 5,295 to 3,424 acres; in Grey, from 6,184 to 4,930, and in McKillop, from 5,369 to 3,929.

A falling off amounting to nearly one-third in the wooded area is indicated by a comparison of the figures for 1896, which give a woodland acreage of 234,807 acres. The following townships show the greatest losses: Amabel, decreased from 15,500 acres to 9,300; Carrick, from 9,129 to 6,656; Elderslie, from 7,301 to 5,209, and Lindsay and St. Edmunds, from 57,086 to 35,299. In the latter case the earlier classification is so defective that no reliable conclusion can be drawn from a comparison with the later figures. The apparent increase in the timbered area of Albemarle from 35,320 to 41,793, and of Bruce Township, from 5,722 to 10,854, is perhaps due to the same cause.

The timber area of Bntinck has diminishd from 13,492 to 7,640 acres; Derby, from 9,409 to 5,954; Keppel, from 33,384 to 21,007 (accompanied by an increase of waste land from 19,198 to 31,570 acres); Osprey, from 19,351 to 8,414, and Sydenham, from 12,270 to 8,576. This county shows a very extensive decrease, the total woodland area in 1896 being 3,3696 acres. The leading changes in this direction are as follows: Flos, from 25,679 acres to 21,257; Medonte, from 38,112 to 22,664; Sunnidale, from 24,275 to 11,872; Vespra, from 16,360 to 19,114, and Orillia, from 34,490 to 8,120. The following letter from the clerk of the latter township explains the very large reduction in the area classed as woodland, and illustrates the result of the process now going on in many parts of the country, in deforesting areas which cannot be turned to any profitable account when denuded of their timber. "The number of acres of swamp marsh and waste land is given as 15,820, whereas 7,100 acres have been formerly returned. Several thousand acres are now returned by the assessor as no value, as the timber has been taken off and the land is too rocky for cultivation, being classed as valueless. This, together with more land being considered swamp than formerly, is the explanation of the difference in the figures." Two of the townships show small increases in woodland.

The wooded area for 1896 is given at 172,401 acres. The returns from twelve townships indicate a falling off. In Adelaide the area is reduced from 10,397 acres to 7,359; Mosa, from 14,774 to 11,427; Nissouri West, from 12,140 to 9,500, and Williams East, from 14,656 to 11,786. Noteworthy exceptions to this general tendency are found in Ekfrid, where the woodland has increased from 15,000 to 22,911 acres, and in Williams West, where a transfer from the waste column has increased it from 4,985 to 9,998.

The woodland area of Wellington was 80,809 acres in 1896. The majority of its townships show a decrease, the greatest diminution being in Luther West, where the acreage has been reduced from 12,716 to 3,589, simultaneously with an increase in the area of waste land. Apparent increases of the woodland in Arthur and Eramosa are in all likelihood due to defects in the returns from 1896. An increase in Nichol from 1,284 to 4,000 is accompanied by a corresponding decrease in waste land.

Prince Edward occupies an exceptional position as one of the two counties in which the process of deforestation has been arrested, and the woodland area appears to be increasing. In 1896 there were 20,527 acres of woodland, as against 24,361 in 1901, showing a net increase of 3,834 acres. The returns indicate that this increase affects every township excepting Hillier, where a slight falling off has occurred. The augmentation is greatest in Ameliasburgh, where it amounts to 1,434 acres. It has been accompanied by a corresponding decrease in the area classed as waste.

This county includes, in addition to several frontier townships, which are well settled and cultivated, a large area to the north which as yet is but sparsely populated. The difference of conditions between the two sections must be borne in mind in considering the forestry situation. The returns show that the aggregate woodland area has decreased from 103,087 acres in 1896 to 88,771 in 1901. An analysis, according to townships, however, makes it evident that this falling off is entirely in the northern portion of the county, and its extent is difficult to estimate, owing to the defective character of some of the returns. Taking a group of seven of the southern townships, however, five of them show an increase in woodland, amounting to 5,266 acres, and the remaining two a decrease of 2,281, making a net increase for this portion of the county of 2,965 acres.

*Equally divided between woodland and waste in calculating the total.

Percentage of woodland, 14.10.

The returns for Frontenac, especially the northern townships, are so imperfect that little dependence can be placed on them. The total wooded area for 1896 is given at 261,689, but as the township returns show large areas unclassified, this is apparently based largely upon estimates. According to the later returns, the woodland in 1901 amounted to 97,356 acres, or a percentage of 14.10 of the total area, but it is probably greater, as a considerable acreage remains unclassified.

In 1896 the total timbered area was given as 120,023 acres. It appears to have decreased somewhat in the interval. Most of the townships show a falling off, but in Elizabethtown an increase from 11,185 to 22,089 acres is returned, and there seem to have been small increases in other places.

The timber-covered area of this county has been increased by 4,154 acres, its extent in 1896 being 40,227 acres. The most noticeable change is in Wolford Township, where the increase of woodland amounts to 4,282 acres, attended by a corresponding falling off in the area classed as waste.

Dundas, which in 1896 had 45,454 acres in wood, shows extensive decreases, especially in Williamsburg, from 18,225 to 9,432 acres, and Winchester, from 8,149 to 4,174 acres. An apparent increase in Mountain Township is evidently partly due to more accurate classification.

The woodland area of Stormont in 1896 is given as 100,707, a figure apparently based largely on estimates, as the township returns for that year are defective. The later returns show large nominal increases in Finch and Osnabrock Townships, in all probability due to greater accuracy in classification.

The wooded acreage of Carleton has considerably decreased, the returns for 1896 giving the total as 103,125. The difference is probably not nearly so great as indicated by a comparison with the figures for 1901, as the returns are obviously defective.

Of the total acreage of Renfrew in 1896, 464,272 acres were returned as woodland, which is evidently only an approximate estimate. There have been several considerable decreases, including those in Hagarty and associated townships, from 21,306 acres to 3,500 acres, Algona South, from 22,118 to 12,544, and Rolph, Buchanan and Wylie, from 30,059 to 19,694. Some apparent increases seem due to the greater accuracy in classification of the returns for 1901, which are still, however, far from perfect in this respect.

The woodland area of Lanark in 1896 was given as 190,855. The returns for 1901 show a number of ostensible increases, most of which appear to be due to the inclusion of land formerly unclassified under the head of woodland. There is a falling off in many townships, the most noteworthy change being in Ramsay, where the wooded area has shrunk from 21,350 to 15,219 acres.

Taking the figures as they stand, Victoria appears to contain the smallest percentage of woodland of any county in the Province, being the only one in which the proportion falls below 5 per cent. The county, however, comprises a great deal of marsh and swamp, and from information received from those familiar with local conditions, there is every reason to suppose that a considerable proportion of this, being wooded, ought properly to be classed as woodland. In addition to this the returns from some townships are defective as they leave a considerable acreage unclassified. An approximately correct return would materially increase the percentage of woodland. The woodland area for 1896 is given as 142,250 acres. Every township, with one exception, shows a decrease, frequently accompanied by an increase in the area classed as waste.

The woodland area of the county was stated at 216,322 acres in 1896. A comparison by townships shows many extensive decreases in timbered land, the principal of which are as follows : Galway and Cavendish, from 32,827 to 14,840 acres ; Harvey, from 23,732 to 17,653 ; Smith, from 12,685 to 8,477, and Otonabee, from 9,037 to 5,800. Some large areas formerly unclassified are now entered as woodland in Burleigh and Anstruther Townships.

Percentage of woodland, 54.72.

The returns of 1896 gave this county a total woodland area of 484,834 acres, but, as is also the case with the figures for 1901, they are largely based on estimates, and cannot be implicitly accepted. A comparison by townships in those cases in which the lands have been classified with an approach to thoroughness indicates that there has been a considerable lessening of the wooded area. The larger reductions are : Lutterworth, from 14,600 acres to 5,507 ; Minden, from 18,002 to 14,546 ; Monmouth, from 18,008 to 8,086, and Stanhope, from 18,714 to 8,391.

A large area of the northern portion of this county is unsettled, and the returns are so defective that any conclusion derived from them might be misleading. The total specified woodland area in 1896 was 425,781 acres, as compared with 365,127 acres for 1901. There have been considerable decreases in some of the townships and apparent increases in others, but little dependence can be placed on the figures in those cases where much of the land remains unclassified. Taking the six old and well settled townships of Huntingdon, Hungerford, Rawdon, Sidney, Thurlow and Tyendinaga, forming the southern portion of the county, the returns for which are more accurate, a comparison of the figures for the two years indicates that similar conditions prevail to those noted in Prince Edward and Grenville. The limit of deforestation appears to have been reached, and there is a slight tendency towards an increase in the area under timber. The total extent of woodland in the group of townships named was 80,989 in 1896, as against 81,711 in 1901.

PRESENT POSITION.

A study of the foregoing tables will show that over-clearance has affected the western and midland counties to a greater extent than the eastern portion of the Province. It will be noticed that all the counties in which the proportion of woodland to total area remains in excess of 25 per cent. are in the eastern direction. Another significant fact developed by analysis of the figures is that any noteworthy increase in the timbered area extending over a large tract of country has occurred in the frontier counties of Eastern Ontario. In Prince Edward and Grenville Counties and in two groups of townships forming the southern portions of Lennox and Addington, and Hastings Counties, respectively, the progress of deforestation has been arrested, and there is a slight increase in the wooded area. There is no indication of any similar tendency affecting any considerable range of country in the western counties, although increases in isolated townships are of comparatively frequent occurrence, but many of these appear to be due to an improvement in classification, and it might be misleading to assume that they represented any material change. In the eastern localities mentioned which are among the older settlements of the Province, the statistics appear to have been carefully compiled, and to afford evidence of a slight alteration for the better as regards the preservation of the remnants of the forest.

WASTE LANDS.

While in most cases the decreases of woodland have been accompanied by an augmentation of the cleared area, there are numerous instances—to some of which attention has been directed—in which the land thus cleared has gone to increase the large amount of territory classed as waste. It is with this class of land, which, owing to its inferiority for purposes of cultivation, becomes practically of no value to the owner or to the community as soon as it is stripped of its timber, that the forestry problem as applied to the settled portions of the Province is mainly concerned. Anything that is to be done towards restoring the equilibrium in over-cleared districts must be accomplished by the reforestation of the waste lands. As can be seen by the figures showing the large proportion which they bear to the total area in the great majority of cases, their utilization in the only way in which they can become a source of profit to the owner, would, together with the existing woodland, furnish an adequate percentage of forest.

The details of the proportions of woodland to the total acreage, as given by counties, do not give an accurate idea of the extent to which the clearing process has been carried in some parts of the country. In most counties the distribution of cleared and uncleared land is very uneven. They often embrace one or more townships, where, owing to special advantages or soil or situation, the owners have every inducement to clear every acre that can be made available for the plow, together with others where a fair proportion of the land still remains wooded. The general average thus obtained might convey the impression that conditions were satisfactory from a forestry point of view. Taking the township rather than the county as a unit, it will be found that in a great many localities a very low percentage has been reached. Excluding from the calculation all those townships where the discrepancy between the total area returned and the aggregate under the different headings of cleared land, woodland and waste, shows a marked want of accuracy in preparing the returns, there are 44 townships in which the proportion of woodland area to the total acreage is less than 5 per cent.

On the basis of these returns, as well as from other sources of information, it is evident that in much of the older settled portion of the Province the proper proportion of wooded to cleared land no longer exists, and evidence is not wanting that we have begun seriously to feel the effects of over-clearance. Farmers are now noting the disadvantage of having no forests to stop the sweep of the winds, owing to which the snow is blown off the fields in winter and the moisture quickly evaporated in the summer, while the melted snow and rain at all seasons runs rapidly off the surface instead of being gradually absorbed into the soil. While many of the farmers already realize the damage to agriculture caused by over-clearance, few have made any attempt to improve the condition of affairs by replanting or by adequately preserving their existing wood lots.

To most farmers the raising of a crop of trees from the seed or from seedling trees seems a long and hopeless undertaking. They fail to see that long before the trees have reached maturity, or even a merchantable size, their presence on the farm in the earlier stage of growth will contribute largely to bring about improved conditions in providing a shelter from the winds. Aside from the apparently unprofitable nature of tree-planting the fact that woodland is liable to be assessed and taxed higher than if the land remained waste or poor pasture land is a deterrent factor, preventing an increased woodland acreage. Under the present assessment law it is to be presumed that the assessor is but doing his duty in thus increasing the valuation on woodlands, but it would seem that this course is not in the general interests of the Province. Whilst many landowners recognize the necessity of increasing the proportion of forest land, no one conceives it to be his individual duty to undertake a work that would be largely to the benefit of the general community. It is true that on much of the waste and broken land comprising a part of most farms a crop of trees, though requiring a long period of growth, would prove the only profitable investment by which these now non-productive areas could be turned to account. But this is not readily apparent to the man who expects to harvest the crop he himself has sown.

That something should be done to correct the process of forest removal in Southern Ontario is obvious, but just what steps to pursue to accomplish this end are not so apparent.

UNITED STATES EXPERIENCE.

The United States includes many older communities than ours, in which the dangers that result from the undue destruction of the forest are of a longer standing and their results more injuriously felt than has so far been the case in Ontario. In many of the States the subject has received close attention from publicists and lawmakers, and various attempts by legislation have been made to remedy the evil, which have apparently in some cases been attended with a measure of success. Before making any suggestions as to proposed remedies for Ontario, I have thought it wise to review some of the legislation bearing on this question in some of the adjoining States of the Union and the following summary has been compiled.

Much of this legislation has been of an experimental character, hence it is not surprising that in some of the States the amendments and modifications of the original measures have been numerous, and that in some cases enactments which were found undesirable or ineffective were subsequently repealed. With the limited data accessible it has not always been found possible to follow the course of legislation, some of the extracts given from the different State codes, doubtless being reproductions in a more or less modified form, of laws passed some time before the date specified.

PENNSYLVANIA.

In accordance with an Act of the Legislature, adopted in 1887, owners of land planted with forest or timber trees not less than 1,200 to the acre, are entitled on due proof to receive annually during the maintenance of the trees in sound condition the following sums from the County Commissioners.

For the first ten years after the land has been so planted, a sum equal to 90 per cent. of all the taxes annually assessed and paid upon the land, or so much thereof as not to exceed 45 cents per acre.

For the second ten years a sum equal to 80 per cent. of the taxes, but not to exceed 40 cents per acre.

For the third period of ten years a sum equal to 50 per cent. of the taxes, but not to exceed 25 cents per acre.

The Act declares it lawful after the trees have been planted ten years to thin them out, so that not less than 600 shall be left to the acre, but no portion of the land is absolutely to be cleared of trees.

The benefits of the act are extended also to the owners of land which has been cleared of merchantable timber upon their giving notice within one year of such clearing to the county commissioners that the land is to be maintained in timber, with the same provisions as to the number to be maintained and as to thinning out. The first period of ten years in such cases is counted from the time of clearing.

In 1897 the partial exemption from taxation granted by the above measure to owners planting their land with trees was extended to the proprietors of existing forest lands. The "Act for the Preservation of Forests and Partially Relieving Forest Lands from Taxation" provided that in consideration of the public benefit to be derived from the retention of forest or timber trees, the owner of land having upon it trees, not less than fifty to the acre, each measuring at least eight inches in diameter, at the height of six feet from the ground, with no portion of the land absolutely cleared of trees should on due proof be entitled to receive annually from the county commissioners, so long as the trees were maintained in sound condition a sum equal to 80 per cent. of the taxes on the land, but not to exceed 45 cents per acre. No one property-owner, however, was to receive this sum on more than 50 acres.

This legislation was modified in 1901 by the substitution of a measure in much the same terms, but specifying the method to be adopted by the land-owner in proving his claim to a rebate. The following is the text of the Act :

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That in consideration of the public benefit to be derived from the retention of forest or timber trees, the owner or owners of land in this Commonwealth, having on it forest or timber trees averaging not less than fifty trees to the acre, each of said trees to measure at least eight inches in diameter, at a height of six feet above the surface of the ground, with no portion of the said land absolutely cleared of the said trees, shall upon filing with the county treasurer of their respective counties, and with the tax collectors of their respective townships or districts an affidavit made by said owner or owners, or by some one in his, her or their behalf, setting forth the number of acres of timber land within the requirements of this act, be entitled to receive annually during the period that the said trees are maintained in good condition upon the said land, a rebate equal to 80 per centum of all taxes, local and county, annually assessed and paid upon said land, or so much of the 80 per centum as shall not exceed in all the sum of 45 cents per acre, the said rebate to be deducted from said taxes, pro rata, and receipted for by the respective tax collector or county treasurers; provided, however, that no one property-owner shall be entitled to receive said rebate on more than fifty acres.

Section 2. All Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

In 1890 the following Act was adopted by the State of South Dakota, being a continuation of similar legislation enacted in 1885 by the then territory of Dakota, which expired in 1890.

1. Every person planting one acre or more of prairie land within ten years after the passage of this Act with any kind of forest trees of not less than nine hundred trees per acre, and one hundred or more of evergreens and successfully growing and cultivating the same for three years, shall be entitled to receive for ten years after the third season of such planting an annual bounty of two dollars for each acre of forest land, not to exceed six acres, and one dollar for every hundred evergreens, not to exceed twelve hundred, so planted and cultivated, to be paid out of the State treasury, but such bounty shall not be paid longer than such grove of trees is maintained and kept in growing condition, provided that trees may be planted in rows running east and west across a quarter section four feet apart in a row, each row to be in lieu of an acre, as above prescribed, but the bounty for such rows shall, in no case exceed twelve dollars.

2. Any person wishing to secure the benefits of this Act shall within three years after the planting of such grove of trees, and annually thereafter, file, on or before the first Monday of July, with the County Auditor of the county in which the same is located, a correct plan of the land, describing the section or fraction thereof on which such grove has been planted or cultivated, and shall make due proof of such planting and cultivation, as well as of the title to the land, by oath of the owner, and the affidavit of two householders residing in the vicinity, setting forth the facts in relation to the growth and cultivation of the grove of trees for which such bounty is demanded. The several county auditors shall, on or before the first Monday of August of each year, forward to the State auditor a certified list of all the lands and tree-planting reported and verified to them, in compliance with this Act, with the name and postoffice address of the respective owners thereof; provided this Act shall not apply to any trees planted upon land entered and acquired under the timber culture laws of the United States.

3. If the State auditor shall find that the provisions of this Act have been duly complied with, he shall issue to the several applicants entitled thereto his warrant upon the State treasurer for the bounty so earned.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The revised Political Code of North Dakota (1895), section 1,177, sub-section 12, enumerates among the exemptions from taxation "all improvements made on real property by setting out either forest or fruit trees, shrubbery or vineyards, the same not to be considered as increasing the value of the land for taxation."

MINNESOTA.

The Statutes of Minnesota, as compiled in 1894, contain the following provisions for bounties for tree-planting:

Section 7,859. That any person who has heretofore, or shall hereafter, plant, cultivate and keep in a growing, thrifty condition, one acre, and not more than ten acres, of prairie land with any kind of forest trees, except black locust, and shall plant or have planted said trees not more than eight feet apart each way, and maintain them at that distance by replanting each year any that may die, shall be entitled to compensation at the rate of two dollars and fifty cents per acre for a period of six years. Provided that this Act shall not apply to any railroad company planting trees within 200 feet of its track, nor to any person planting trees in compliance with an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to encourage the growth of timber on western prairies," approved March 3, 1873, or any Act amendatory thereto.

Section 7,860. Any person wishing to secure the benefits of this Act shall file with the county auditor of the county in which the land is located a correct plat of such grove or line of trees and designate the same by metes and bounds, giving the sub-division on which the same is located, according to Government survey, and if such grove or line of trees is extended, supplemental plats of such extension made out in like manner, shall be filed from time to time as such extension is made. Such applicant for compensation shall also make proof of the ownership of the land, and of the planting and maintaining of the requisite number of trees, and at the proper distance, as above specified, and of the cultivation and maintenance in a thrifty, growing condition of the same, as within provided to be verified by the claimant, and supported by the affidavit of at least two freeholders, residents of the same town, who have personal knowledge of the facts, which proof is to be filed with the county auditor of the county between the first and fifteenth days of the year, for which such compensation is claimed. Such proof shall be made in such form and on such blanks as shall be prescribed by the Minnesota Forestry Association, in conformity with the spirit of this Act.

The original law, passed in 1873, of which the foregoing is an amendment, provided also for the payment of a bounty to persons planting and keeping in a thrifty condition half a mile or more of forest trees along any public highway, at the rate of $2 per half mile for six years. The law, as it now stands, omits this provision.

Minnesota also appropriates annually $300, to be placed at the disposal of the State Agricultural Society for the payment of premiums for the best five acres of cultivated timber, or continuous half-mile of live hedge fence.

MAINE.

The Revised Statutes of Maine (1883) contain the following provision, originally enacted in 1872.

Chapter 6, Section 6, Sub-section XI. Whenever a landholder, having, prior to March 30, 1882, planted or set apart for the growth and production of forest trees any cleared land or lands from which the primitive forest had been removed, successfully cultivates the same for three years, the trees being not less in numbers than two thousand on each acre, and well distributed over the same, then, on application of the owner or occupant thereof to the assessors of the town in which such land is situated, the same shall be exempt from taxation for twenty years after the said application, provided that the said applicant at the same time files with said assessors a correct plan of such land, with a description of its location, and a statement of all the facts in relation to the growth and cultivation of said incipient forest; provided, further that such grove or plantation of trees is during that period kept alive and in a thriving condition.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The following provision for the exemption of plantations of timber trees from taxation appears in the Public Statutes of Massachusetts (1882), Chapter 11, section 7:

All plantations of chestnut, hickory, white ash, white oak, sugar maple, European larch and pine timber trees, in number not less than two thousand trees to the acre upon land (not at the time of said planting woodland or sprout-land, and not having been such within five years previously) the actual value of which at the time of planting does not exceed fifteen dollars per acre, shall, together with the land upon which the same are situated, be exempt from taxation for a period of ten years from and after said trees have grown in height four feet on the average, subsequently to such planting: provided that such exemptions shall not extend beyond the time during which said land is devoted exclusively to the growth of said trees, and that the owner or owners of such plantations appear and prove to the satisfaction of the board of assessors in the towns where the same are located, the existence of said conditions.

CONNECTICUT.

In 1886 an enactment for the exemption of tree plantations from taxation was adopted. It is embodied in the Revised Statutes of 1887, as follows:

Section 3,825. When any person shall plant land not heretofore woodland, the actual value of which at the time of planting does not exceed twenty-five dollars an acre, to timber trees of any of the following kinds, to wit., chestnut, hickory, ash, white oak, sugar maple, European larch, white pine, black walnut, tulip or spruce, not less in number than 1,200 to the acre, and such plantation of trees shall have grown to an average height of six feet, the owner of such plantation may appear before the Board of Relief of the town in which such plantation is located, and on proving a compliance with the conditions herein, such plantation of trees shall be exempt from taxation of any kind for a period of twenty years next thereafter.

ILLINOIS.

The Illinois law is based upon the principle of local option. It was originally adopted in 1874 and reads as follows:

Revised Statutes, 1897, chapter 136.

1. That it shall be lawful for the board of supervisors or county commissioners' court (board of county commissioners) in any county in this State to offer a bounty to any person in said county who shall hereafter plant one or more acres of land with forest trees, and properly cultivate the same for three years, any sum not to exceed $10.00 per annum for three years for each acre so planted and cultivated. Provided that trees so planted shall not be at a greater distance than 10 feet apart each way.

2. Any person claiming the bounty under this act shall make proof before the county clerk that he has complied with section 1 of this act, and that the trees planted by him are in a healthy and growing condition.

3. Upon proof of a compliance with this act the county clerk shall issue his certificate to the person entitled to the same, setting forth that the provisions of this act have been complied with and the number of acres planted.

4. The board of supervisors or county commissioners' court, desiring to offer the bounty herein provided for shall do so by resolution, to be made of record, and giving notice in some newspaper published in the county three weeks prior to the first day of April of each year, said resolution and notice to state the amount of bounty offered for each acre planted and cultivated.

WISCONSIN.

The Wisconsin Statutes, 1898, contain the following provisions. 1,038 sub-section 18—exempt from taxation such tree belts as are or may be planted and maintained in compliance with chap. 61 of these statutes.

Chap. 61, 1,469. Every owner or possessor of five acres of land or more who shall successfully grow by planting with forest trees, consisting of the following kinds or such species thereof as will grow to the height of 50 feet or more, viz.: arbor vitae, ash, balsam fir, basswood, beech, birch, butternut, cedar, black cherry, chestnut, coffee-tree, cucumber tree, elm, hackberry, hickory, larch, locust, maple, oak, pine, spruce, tulip tree and walnut, tree belts in the manner and form prescribed in the next section shall be entitled to have the land on which such tree belts grow exempted from taxation from the time the tree commences to grow until they shall reach the height of 12 feet, and after they shall have attained that height to receive an annual bounty of $2.00 per acre for each acre so grown.

1,470. Such tree belts shall be planted on the west or south sides of each tract of land, be of uniform width throughout their entire length, contain not less than eight trees, at nearly equidistance, on each square rod of land, and be at least 30 feet wide for each 5-acre tract, 60 feet wide for each 10-acre tract and 100 feet wide for each square 40-acre tract, and upon all square tracts of land upon two sides thereof. All trees belts owned by the same land owner must be planted not to exceed 1-4 of a mile apart and on the west and south sides of every square 40 acres, and shall not exceed one-fifth of the entire tract of land on which the same are planted: Provided, that when the east and north sides or either of any tract of land is bounded by a public highway a tree belt one rod wide may be planted next to said highway, although it with the others on the west and south sides shall exceed 1-5th of the whole tract, and tree belts may be planted on any other lines within each 40 square acres by permission of the assessor.

1,471. The assessor shall, upon the application of the owner thereof, in each year, at the time of assessing the personal property in his district, make a personal examination of all tree belts for which bounty or exemption from taxation is claimed, and ascertain whether they have been planted as required in the preceding section and are thriftily growing; and if he shall be satisfied thereof he shall not assess the same for taxation unless the trees thereon shall have attained the height of 12 feet, and in that case he shall deliver to the owner a certificate that he is entitled to an annual bounty of $2.00 for each acre of such tree belts, stating therein the whole amount of such bounty and giving a description of the entire land of which the tree belts form a part, and the amount of such bounty shall be credited by the treasurer in payment of any taxes assessed on such land as so much cash; but if not so satisfied the assessor shall assess the land for taxes or refuse to grant any certificate for the bounty, as the case may require, and if, after any certificate of such bounty shall have been issued, the owner of such tree belts shall suffer the same to die out by want of cultivation or otherwise, or shall cut the same down, or in any other way allow the same to be so thinned out that in the opinion of the assessor he ought no longer to receive such bounty, he shall give the treasurer written notice thereof, and thereafter no further bounty shall be allowed until such owner shall again receive a certificate therefor.

COLORADO.

Colorado Statutes, 1891, sec. 2306. That whenever the owner or occupant of land under irrigation within this State has, or shall hereafter plant any fruit or forest trees, there shall not be added any increased valuation in the assessment of said land by reason of the gain in value that may be acquired by reason of such planting and cultivation, within a period of ten years thereafter.

That whenever a line of forest trees not less than 16 feet apart shall hereafter be planted, at not more than 8 feet from the outer line of a highway upon which his land may border, or along ditches within his land, and kept in good growing condition for three years, there shall be paid as a premium to such owner of the said land, on the fourth year and for the next six years following, the sum of $2.00 for every 100 trees so planted, provided that said trees be so long kept in good thriving condition.

INDIANA.

"A bill for an Act for the Encouragement of Forestry," as follows, was enacted in 1899.

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That upon any tract of land in the State of Indiana there may be selected by the owner, or owners, as a permanent forest reservation, a portion not to exceed one-eighth of the total area of said tract, which shall be appraised for taxation at one dollar per acre.

Sec. 2. If such selection is an original forest, containing not less than 170 trees in each acre, it shall become subject to this act upon filing with the auditor of the county in which it is situated a description of such selection as is hereinafter provided.

Sec. 3. If any land owner shall plant not less than 170 trees on each acre of selected forest reservation, and shall cultivate and maintain the same for three years, then it shall become subject to this act, as herein provided.

Sec. 4. Upon any tract selected as a forest reservation which contains 100 or more original forest trees on each acre, the owner may plant a sufficient number of forest trees, which shall make up the required 170 trees per acre, when the same shall become subject to this act, as in section 3.

Sec. 5. No land owner shall receive the benefit of this act who shall permit cattle, horses, sheep, hogs or goats to pasture upon such reservation until said trees are four inches in diameter.

Sec. 6. Whenever any tree or trees shall be removed or die the owner in order to avail himself of this act shall plant other trees in place of such trees as may be removed or die, and protect said trees until they are four inches in diameter, shall plant others which shall at all times maintain the full number required by this act.

Sec. 7. Not more than one-fifth of the full number of trees in any forest reservation shall be removed in any one year, excepting that such trees as may die naturally may be removed, when other trees shall be planted.

Sec. 8. Ash, maple, pine, oak, hickory, basswood, elm, black locust, honey locust, Kentucky coffee tree, chestnut, walnut, butternut, larch, tulip tree, mulberry, osage orange, sassafras and catalpa shall be considered forest trees within the meaning of this act.

Sec. 9. It shall be the duty of the auditor in every county to keep a record of all forest reservations as the same shall be filed with him, and he shall require the owner or agent to subscribe under oath the extent and description of the land reserved, and that the number of trees is as required by this act, and that he will maintain the same according to the intent of this enactment.

Sec. 10. It shall be the duty of the assessor to personally examine the various forest reservations when the real estate is appraised, and to note upon his return the conditions of the trees, in order that the intent of this act may be complied with. And if the reservation is properly planted and continuously cared for, he shall appraise the same at one dollar per acre.

NEBRASKA.

The compiled Statutes of Nebraska, 1897, contained a provision giving a bonus from the county to land owners planting and maintaining rows of trees on their own property near the roadsides. The trees were to be set out in six rows, eight feet apart, and the trees four feet apart in the row, and the bounty payable was $3.33 per acre for not more than three acres and for a period of not more than three years. This act was repealed in 1899.

There are several other States in which enactments to encourage tree planting are or have been in force, the particulars of which are not readily obtainable.

TENDENCY OF AMERICAN LEGISLATION.

It will be observed that the foregoing extracts from American Statute Books only include such legislation as has for its object the encouragement of action by private land owners, and would be very considerably extended had the numerous measures authorizing State forestry operations on a broader scale been given. To do so, however, would have been irrelevant to the particular phase of the question now under consideration. The extent to which American legislators are taking action in this direction is indicated by a review of the "Trend of Legislation in the United States," by Robert Harvey Whitten, Ph.D., published in the New York State Library Bulletin for 1900, in which the writer notes that ten States have established Forestry Boards to encourage the growing and the preservation of forests, and that North Dakota and New York have established State schools of forestry. Taken in connection with the measures given above this activity in forestry legislation shows that the importance of maintaining and increasing the forest area is generally realized by the legislative bodies of the United States and by an active and growing public opinion among the people of the republic.

An analysis of the enactments adopted to stimulate private initiative in tree culture and preservation discloses a great variety in the plans in force in the different States. In the majority of the States represented on the list the land or the greater portion of it was originally prairie and the inducements held out to tree growers usually take the form of bounties to be paid for a term of years. The conditions in some cases allow the trees to be planted in belts or rows. This mode of planting, while it is undoubtedly beneficial to the farms in the immediate neighborhood, can hardly be regarded as of sufficiently general advantage to justify the payment of a bounty out of the public treasury for its encouragement. The experience of Ontario, which resulted in the repeal of that portion of the tree-planting act authorizing the payment of a Government bonus for the planting of trees in rows, on account of the undesirability and ineffectiveness of this system appears to have been shared by Minnesota and Nebraska where it has also been abandoned.

The five States among the number in which the conditions most resemble those of Ontario are Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Maine, Massachusetts and Connecticut. They were all of them originally thickly timbered and now contain large tracts of waste land, from which the timber has been removed, leaving such portions as are not adapted for agriculture in an unproductive condition. In order to induce replanting exemption from taxation for a term of years is granted. In the three New England States the laws distinctly specify that this benefit is only extended to cleared land afterwards replanted. In Pennsylvania, where the exemption is only partial, the scope of the law has been widened so as to include land already in timber, leaving upon it not fewer than 50 large trees to the acre so long as this condition is maintained. The New England laws are much more stringent in their requirements. Those of Maine and Massachusetts specifying 2,000 trees to the acre, and that of Connecticut 1,200. Furthermore, there appears to be no provision as to the thinning out of the trees as they increased in size, such as exists in the Pennsylvania law, in which respect these enactments are clearly defective. Trees planted as thickly as 2,000 or even 1,200 an acre and allowed to grow towards maturity without being thinned will retard each others growth and advance but slowly.

The Wisconsin law provides exclusively for the planting of trees in belts varying from 30 to 100 feet in width according to location, and in addition to exemption from taxation provides for an annual bounty of $2 per acre after the trees have attained twelve feet in height.

The recent measure adopted in Indiana is a new departure which presents some points worthy of consideration. It appears calculated to meet some features of the situation better than the exemption legislation of the New England States, which is too exacting and inflexible as to the conditions both as to the quality and state of the land and the number of trees to be planted or the bounty provisions of the western States. It gives neither exemption nor bounty, but fixes the rate of assessment upon any tract of land set apart by the owner as to forest reservation at the nominal figure of one dollar per acre. In case the tract selected is already in forest, having not less than 170 trees to the acre, it becomes at once subject to the act; if it is cleared land it becomes so in three years by the planting and maintenance of the same number of trees, and if it be partly forest containing 100 or more original forest trees to the acre the owner may plant a sufficient number to make up the deficiency. The owner is required to replace trees that may die or be removed and may remove not more than one-fifth in any one year. This law appears to meet the case of half-cleared woodlands, or waste in which a portion of the old trees are left or a second growth is springing up which would not fall within the scope of most of the enactments quoted. It is precisely this class of land which offers the best opportunities for reforestation, and which legislators who desire to encourage replanting should especially keep in view as the only source from which the forest area is likely to be materially increased.

The principal difficulty in the way of any effective legislation in Ontario in the line of the enactments for the encouragement of woodland preservation and tree-planting adopted in the United States lies in the loose methods of assessment which prevail in many parts of the Province.

An essential requisite to the satisfactory working of any plan that might be adopted is greater accuracy in the classification of land as cleared, woodland or waste. Were this secured it would then be possible to discriminate in favor of the land owner who should undertake to plant or preserve in timber a certain proportion of his holding. But under present conditions such an one is in a worse position with respect to taxation than the man who clears off land which by means of its infertility is classified as waste or swamp and consequently assessed at a low figure, or who can persuade an easy-going or careless assessor to enter wholly or partly cleared and uncultivated land of a better quality under that heading. A prominent cause of the present loose and slipshod system is the desire on the part of many farmers to evade taxation by making their land appear less valuable than it really is. An official of a county which shows on the face of the returns a very small proportion of woodland explains the matter as follows: "I fear that the same moral obliquity that makes it possible for some men to withhold information as to the number of cattle, hogs and horses owned by them lest the fact might in some way increase their taxes, leads them to class much of their uncleared land as swamp when it should be returned as woodland, because acknowledgment of the latter might mean higher assessed value. It should be, however, stated in justice to the owners of farms that the general understanding is that woodland means what is commonly spoken of as hardwood bush." Whether this usage prevails elsewhere does not appear, but it surely was not the intention of the framers of the law that timber covered land whatever its quality should be entered as anything else than woodland. The legislation might very well as a means of clearing the way for future action having regard to timber preservation undertake at the outset to define as closely as possible the respective qualities of the land to be included under the different classifications of "cleared land," "woodland" and "swamp marsh or waste"—so as to secure something like a correct return as to the total amount of all wood-covered land of whatever quality of soil. As the law and the current practice with regard to assessment at present stands it not only fails to give any encouragement to woodland preservation or tree culture, but it is distinctly unfavorable to it, in so far as waste land is liable to be assessed at a lower rate than woodland.

MANAGEMENT OF THE FARMER'S WOODLOT.*

By Wm. N. Hutt, Southend, Ontario .

I think it may safely be said that the farmer's woodlot or bush receives less care and attention than any other part of the farm. Indeed the woodlot is hardly considered as part of the farm at all. The attention it generally receives is the destructive blows of the axe in winter, and the less harmful browsing of stock in summer. Under this treatment the wood is constantly decreasing in quantity and value, and the land lies as an unprofitable stumpy waste, which is neither wood nor pasture, or is turned into cultivation for which being generally poor land, it is little fitted. Doubtless this unproductiveness of the woodlot is due to the fact, that farmers generally do not consider the bush capable of any systematic management or regular cropping, or at all capable of repaying any labor expended upon it.

As farmers we are too apt to consider bush land as something to be cleared up, and not to be perpetuated, or as a gift of nature for our own special benefit, and one that cannot be renewed. The time it takes for a seedling tree to become of marketable value is not as long as is usually supposed. Of course, if we had to begin on a bare field to raise timber it would be a somewhat different matter. But in the ordinary woodlot we find trees of 10, 20, 30, 50 or even of 70 or 100 years of growth.

Nature if left to herself will gradually change a scanty coppice into a forest of value, but at best her methods in forestry are slow and somewhat irregular. However, by careful thought and practical management, nature may be so assisted that the woodlot may be made to supply not only all present needs for fuel, but to give regular crops of merchantable timber and to be year by year increasing in permanent value. Growing forest trees are very susceptible of management; the crooked may be made straight or the straight crooked, the spreading may be made close, or the close to spread, just as we wish. While the prices of wheat and other farm products have been decreasing and are likely to decrease still more, the price of lumber owing to increasing scarcity has been continually going up. We are painfully reminded of this fact if we wish to put up any building however small. Any woods under careful handling may be made to produce regular if not annual crops without the expenditure of a single dollar for replanting.

With these few facts in mind, it is our intention to outline the practical management of a woodlot, such as we might find it anywhere throughout the country, with a view to attaining its greatest present usefulness and permanent value.

Taking a sort of inventory of an ordinary woodlot we would find it somewhat as follows: 1, more or less (generally less) of mature trees; 2, trees past maturity; 3, premature trees; 4, healthy growing trees; 5, coppice and seedlings; 6, stump land; 7, waste, i.e., with no wood on it whatever.

1. Mature trees are those which by reason of age have arrived at their greatest size and most valuable quantity of timber, and are therefore ready for cutting.

2. Trees past maturity are those which have not been cut on becoming mature, have become dead at the top, and the rain getting down into them has destroyed the quality of the wood. Finally, these trees become hollow, and though they may be annually laying on new wood underneath the bark, yet owing to the action of insects and wood-destroying fungi, the rate of decay gradually exceeds the rate of growth, till some day the wind brings them down as useless old shells.

3. Premature trees are those which by reason of some accident of wind or storm have become broken and decayed, and being thereby checked in growth they never make valuable timber. A dead top and stunted growth are generally indicative of the premature condition.

*The illustrations in this article, by the courtesy of Mr. Gifford Pinchot and the United States Bureau of Forestry were taken from Pinchot's "Primer of Forestry" published by the Bureau.

4. Healthy growing trees are those which are to take the places of the mature trees as the latter are removed.

5. Coppice consists of the shoots that spring up from the stumps of trees that have been cut. See figure 1. The seedlings are the tiny trees which have come up from the seed of the mature trees.

Fig. 1. Chestnut sprouts from the stump.

METHODS OF REPLANTING.

The first thing to be done with the woodlot is to get it all under crop. There should not be a square rod of it that is not producing trees. Land in a wheat field not producing wheat is waste land; land in a bush that is not raising trees is also waste land.

REPRODUCTION OF TREES.

All trees reproduce themselves naturally from seed, some also by coppice and under natural conditions the mature trees would seed the ground around them. In this way spaces would gradually become filled up with growing timber. If, however, stock are allowed to graze in the woodlot the seedlings and undergrowth are prevented from coming up, and all natural provision for the perpetuation of the forest is cut off. The rough pasture on the few open spaces in a woodlot is of very little value, while the harm done to the trees is very great.

KEEP IN STOCK.

One woodlot which I have had under observation gave a very clear proof of this last year. In the spring as growth started around, the mature trees could be seen coming up a fine crop of young seedlings. In a few weeks cattle and sheep were turned into the woods. In summer the pasture became very bare, and the stock browsed off the leaves of the little seedlings. Owing to excessive drought in the early fall the pasture was not renewed, and the stock ate off not only the leaves, but also the green shoots of the trees and shrubs as high up as they could reach. In the fall when the stock were taken out of the woods there was not a seedling to be seen, nor a leaf, nor a green shoot on the older trees within five or six feet of the ground. Under this treatment year after year this lot has produced no new trees, and the old trees being removed, it is becoming unprofitable, stumpy waste. But by far the greater injury from stock results indirectly from the trampling of the soil and the consequent destruction of the natural mulch about the trees. On the vegetable mould of the forest floor depend largely the health and vigor of the trees. This mould, which is composed chiefly of decaying leaves, twigs, is of a very porous nature, and forms a natural reservoir for water. See figure 2. Under the shade of the tree tops the moisture of the vegetable mould is given up slowly throughout the season, and the air about the trees is kept in that humid condition so favorable for plant growth. The downward movement of water through the forest mould is also slow, and as the water table gradually lowers the roots of the trees push downward through the softened subsoil. For this reason forest trees under natural conditions are deep rooted, and are seldom blown down by high winds. Moreover, by virtue of the slow movement of water in the forest mould the springs of the woodland have a continuous even flow throughout the year.

One of the most noticeable features of pastured woodlots is the absence of the natural forest mould. The sharp feet of stock cut up the soft turf and pack it, so that its water-holding capacity is practically destroyed. For this reason creeks become in spring rushing torrents, roaring down hillsides and tearing away the fertile soil and are dried up rocky gullies almost before summer comes. Rain falling upon pastured woods finds in the soil no natural reservoir, but passes quickly through the soil to swell for a few hours the creeks and is lost to the trees. When summer comes the soil of a pastured woods is hard and cracked like a bare fallow. The rain which fell upon it passed through it so quietly that the roots of the trees have been unable to follow down after the too rapidly receding water table. Deep root growth under such conditions is checked, and the trees are very frequently blown over by strong winds. It is not an uncommon thing on closely pastured woodlots to see sturdy oaks and maples or even the tough-rooted elm overturned by the wind.

Besides being a reservoir for moisture, the forest mould is a natural seed bed, and a nursery for nuts and seeds which fall upon it from the trees above. It must be known that seedlings of forest trees are among the most delicate of all plants, and require during the early years almost ideal conditions of vegetation. In the deep, rich mould under the protecting shade of the parent trees the little seedling finds this ideal condition of growth in which to start. When a break occurs in the leafy canopy overhead the little tree stretches up quickly to fill up the gap. The parched and trampled soil of a pastured woodlot offers only a lingering death to the tender seedling and nature's means of perpetuating the forest is cut off. For this reason pasture ranges are always characterized by a decreasing number of trees, and the roots of them lacking their natural protection the trees have always a stunted scrubby appearance. On constantly pastured woods it is not an uncommon thing in a dry summer to see large trees wither up and die. Doubtless these trees had been resisting adverse conditions for years, the wonder was that they lived so long. I have on account of its importance treated this phase of the subject at considerable length, and would say finally that it might be set down as a maxim in forestry that pasturing stock about trees is absolutely antagonistic to successful wood culture.

After all stock are kept out the older trees will seed the waste places, but as the sod has usually become very rough in most bushes, the seedlings have lessened chances of surviving. It has been found to be the cheapest and best method to break up the land where possible, and seed it artificially or plant it with trees.

METHOD OF SEEDING AND PLANTING.

When possible a good way is to plow up the land and make a seed bed in which the little trees are grown and tended until they are able to take care of themselves. Tree seeds are produced annually, but generally every second year, and will not stand drying like other seeds. The nuts and seeds of broad leaf trees are best collected as soon as ripe and packed in moist earth till sown. Chestnuts will be injured in germinating power by drying even for twenty-four hours. The seeds of pines and other evergreen trees may be best kept by gathering the ripened cones in the fall and storing in a dry, cool place till ready for planting. When cultivating up the land and seeding is not practicable on account of stumps and rocky hillsides, trees may be transplanted from a nursery, or the young seedlings may be taken from the woods. By saving the seeds in the nursery row and giving them garden cultivation, larger trees may be grown in a given time, but the tap root is cut off and they have a tendency to spread out into branches instead of growing long, straight trunks. Nursery bred trees when placed on poor soil and left to shift for themselves, are usually overtaken by seedlings, under natural conditions. The seedlings grown from nuts have very long tap roots and will not bear transplanting. Nuts and acorns should therefore be planted where the trees are to remain. A method I have found very handy in planting large seeds, such as nuts and acorns, is to punch a hole in the sod about four inches deep with a light crowbar, and to drop in the seed and cover it, pressing the earth in firmly with the heel. Plant nuts thickly, using not less than 10 or 12 per square rod. This will be at the rate of about 1-2 bushel per acre of shelled nuts. Seedling trees may often be found growing in great numbers under the shade of the mother trees. These may be removed in moist weather and put in with a dibble, where required, putting in not less than four trees per square rod. On lake beaches or drifting sandy wastes it is often next to impossible to get any useful species to grow. In cases of this kind some quick-growing varieties such as poplar, willow or box elder are planted as nurse trees, and as soon as some humus is collected about them the seedlings of more desirable trees are planted under their protecting shade. After the useful species have become established the nurse trees may be cut for fuel and the latter come on and take possession of the soil. Many kinds of seedlings are very delicate and slow growing during their first few years of growth and need to be shaded from the scorching rays of the sun. It is for this reason that the best seedlings are usually found in the moist shade of the mother tree. Weeds or any leafy plant will afford a useful shelter for the little trees, but on the other hand, if the weeds grow too rank they may shut out the sunlight and starve them. It is well to go over the plantation with a scythe and cut away the weeds where they may be growing too thick and overtopping the young trees.

KIND OF TREES TO PLANT.

The question arises, what kinds of trees should we have in the woodlot? This will depend somewhat on the nature of the soil, but we should like to have those native species which have the highest market value. The soil of the woodlot is usually the poorest of any soil on the farm and rightly so, for of all crops on poor land wood is that which will give the largest yield.

WHITE PINE.

If the land is high and gravelly or sandy it might be stocked with white pine, which is "the king of all forest trees." However, pine is often found on land that is pretty stiff in texture, but its growth there would be slow.

CHESTNUT.

Chestnut is also suited to light and well drained land and has a high value for furniture, railway ties, posts, etc.

ELM.

Elm by virtue of its present demand for making furniture, baskets, bicycle rims, etc., is becoming a valuable timber, and it has the advantage that it is a rapid grower and will thrive well on almost any land, even where it is too wet for most trees to grow. It has been selling locally for $6.00 per 1,000 feet, or $9.00 per cord.

HICKORY.

Hickory is a tree valuable for its nuts as well as for its timber. Some farmers living near Niagara Falls derive quite an important revenue from hickory nuts grown on their farms. Hickory is worth $12.00 to $15.00 per cord for making spokes and tool handles. The young trees come into value when not more than four or five inches in diameter and the yearly thinnings from a woodlot have a considerable market value.

BASSWOOD.

Basswood is a rapid grower and is much used in making carriages, cabinet work and organs. It is also a valuable honey plant.

ASH AND MAPLE.

Ash and maple are much used for interior house furnishing.

WHITE OAK.

White oak is at present the fashionable wood for furniture.

CEDAR.

The cedar can be grown in swamps and places too wet for any other tree and few trees are more valuable.

Fig. 3. Mixed forest of shadlers and shade-enduring trees

BLACK WALNUT.

Where it can be grown there is no more attractive or valuable tree than the black walnut. For use in making expensive furniture it rivals mahogany, and has been known to sell as high as $100 per hundred feet rough.

MIXED PLANTATIONS.

Trees seem to do better in mixed plantations than when planted all of one kind, and there is the further advantage that by raising varieties almost double the number of trees can be grown per acre. Forest trees vary much in the amount of shade they bear. Some, like the beech, the sugar maple, or the spruce tree, have a dense crown and are thickly leaved down the trunk, and in the interior of the crown. This shows that the leaves can exist and perform their work in a small amount of light; in other words, the beech, maple and spruce are shade enduring trees. On the other hand there are trees like the walnut, the chestnut and the oak which have scanty foliage and do not have leaves inside of or under the crown. This shows that their leaves cannot perform their functions in the shade. Such trees as these are light-needing trees. The shade-enduring varieties can thrive well under the different light of the light-needing trees. For this reason we may just double the number of trees per acre by combining the shade-enduring and the light-needing trees, and the addition of the former will not be a detraction but a benefit to the latter. See figure 3. Under ordinary conditions the trees should stand so thickly that a man with an axe in his hand would be able to touch half a dozen trees in a circle about him. See Fig. 4.

Fig. 4. A good thick forest cover.

TRIMMING AND CUTTING.

As soon as the woodlot is entirely under crop, and of the desired varieties, the treatment will consist in taking out the weeds of the forest, or in other words all trees of inferior varieties, and those that will not eventually make large, valuable timber. Such trees as hawthorn, ironwood, blue or water beech are of dwarf crooked habit, and never make valuable timber even for fuel. If there are promising young trees of more valuable varieties, that would take the place of these the inferior trees should be cut away. Such trees as red oak, yellow birch, willow, etc., though of larger habit than the last, could profitably give place to more valuable species. However, no tree should be cut unless there are young trees growing under its shade, which will in a few years fill up its place. The trees should stand so closely that no grass can grow under them. When the forest shade becomes so scanty that grass takes the place of the natural mould or humus covering, it may safely be said that the trees are not thick enough, and under such circumstances no thinning or cutting whatever should take place. See Fig. 5. If the forest cover is thick enough all premature trees should be cut out. These may be of valuable sorts, but will never make timber of good size or quality. Other trees again are comparatively useless for timber because they have been started under open conditions, and the trunk is short and branched into many limbs. These trees will never make much but fuel, and should as soon as possible give place to better trees. Of seedlings only the most promising should be allowed to grow, but a small crooked tree may make a straight upward growth after having its top cut off, so that its energies are directed into one straight, vigorous shoot.

FORCING TIMBER.

When the inferior trees are cut away and their places taken by straight, vigorous trees the management of the woods consists in simply forcing on to maturity the remaining valuable trees. Where trees are grown very thickly there is a constant competition among them for each to stretch up to the light to overtop the others. This competition causes them to throw up very long, straight stems. The shade of the tops makes the lower and inside branches die, and drop off, and the trunks are thus rendered free of knots. See Fig. 6. By the proper proportioning of the light-needing and the shade-enduring trees the latter may be used in forcing the upward growth of the former, while the denser foliage of the shadders will be effective in denuding the other trees of side branches. The shade-enduring species do not suffer from the shade as the smaller light-needing trees would under their mother trees, and so they are forming timber in what would be to the other kind of trees impossible conditions.

Those trees which can overtop the others and get the most light will make the greatest growth, while the continual stretching out of the others will force the leaders in maintaining their supremacy to keep lengthening their trunks. This goes on until the limit of height for the variety of tree is reached. The tree will have a very long straight trunk, but will be of little value as it has no great thickness. If the surrounding trees which have forced this tree up in height be removed it will develop a spreading top, and direct its energies towards growth in thickness. See Fig. 7.

This is the life of a forest tree, and only when it has attained its proper height and developed a crown does it begin to make much wood. When the mature tree is cut out those trees under it, which have suffered from its shade, at once begin to branch out and take up its place.

Practical forestry management then simply consists in assisting the process of nature, and sometimes even in forcing her hand to direct the growth and hasten the maturity of trees.
